men whose professions of honesty were most boisterous were usually the greatest rogues, and that he conceived the principle had been aptly illustrated by the speakers on the opposite side. He replied to the insults which had been flung at the people of Kansas of having acknowledged the validity of the bogus laws by voting under their provisions, by showing that not a Free-State man in the Territory consented to participate in the election until Governor WALKER had published his celebrated letter that "Not under a territorial bond, but under an act of Congress, the people of Kansas should have a free and fair vote. He replied to Mr. STEWART and YOUNG, by reminding them that in Kansas the people had had no way of punishing the guilty except by taking it into their own hands. Concluded his counsel to the Free-State party—repeated his advice to the bogus Constitutional Convention, and concluded amid deafening cheers.

The resolution was then adopted by acclamation, and the Committee were appointed informally, for the purpose of withholding their names from the public for manifest reasons. The meeting thereupon adjourned.

Weakness in Kansas.

Extract of a letter from Lawrence, Kansas, Oct. 17, 1857.

The Money market, as in the States, is rather tight—worth from 2@3 ⅌ cent. ⅌ month on good security. The most of the specie that comes to Kansas is expended in the purchase of land from the Government. Real estate is cheap to what it was in the spring—buy for cash 30 ⅌ cent. below Spring prices.

The present indications are that a majority of the next Territorial Legislature will be Free-State. Secretary STANTON and Governor WALKER have set aside some of the most fraudulent returns, leaving our people considerable ahead of the Pro-Slavery Party.

Good crops of Corn and Wheat. Farmers are doing well. Old Corn, $1 75 ⅌ bushel; new, 75c.; seed Wheat, $2; Flour, $4@$5 ⅌ sack. (100 lbs.)

Submission of the Constitution to the Popular Vote—The Southern Ultraists Denounced.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Oct. 28.

WASHINGTON CITY, Monday, Oct. 26, 1857.

I regret exceedingly to find that there is a party (query, faction?) at the South, determined to leave no effort untried, and to use all means, whether fair or of equivocal morality, to exasperate ill-feeling between the North and South. Their writers evidently encourage the Convention in Kansas to send the Constitution which they shall frame, to Congress, without submitting it to the people. This Convention represents but a fraction of the residents of Kansas, at the time of their election, and probably not one-tenth of the actual bona fide residents now. Whatever may have been the occasional practice in submitting Constitutions to the people, no fair-minded man disputes the proposition, that under all circumstances, such Constitutions should be so submitted, unless it was clearly understood by the people, when they voted for the members of the Convention, that there would be no such submission. Here there was no understanding of the kind, and a very large number of voters refused to register themselves, and of those registered a large proportion refused to vote. In consequence of this, a Pro-Slavery Convention was elected in a Territory in which a large majority were probably then opposed to Slavery. Now, would it be fair or honorable to take advantage of a technicality, to take judgment by default, or to force a Constitution on a reluctant people as a punishment for contumacy? Are we in the great matter of framing the organic law for a people who, in a few years, will be numbered probably by the million, to resort to the trickery and chicanery of special pleading?

It is notorious that the proposition to refer to Congress without submission to the people, is made by those who believe the people would reject it, if so referred. But a part of the people were, say they, contumacious, stood out and would not plead at rules, and now the office judgment shall stand confirmed against all of them. Why, such miserable technicalities are not even countenanced in a court of law.

And who are the men who propose to practice this gross injustice? Why, the very men who insisted at the time of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, that "the principle of equality of right in the settlement of the Territories was all they desired," for Kansas was too far North to expect that enough slaveholders would settle in it to be able to establish a Pro-Slavery Constitution!

This admission was very influential in securing the passage of the bill. And now, that it is obvious that the admission was true, the men who made it propose to take a snap judgment, and palm a Pro-Slavery Constitution off on an Anti-Slavery people! Is this Southern chivalry? Is it good faith? Will it heal division between the sections? Is it intended for such purpose, or for another and very different purpose?

Suppose this Convention, under these circumstances, sends a Pro-Slavery Constitution, or any other Constitution to Congress, without submitting it to the people, is Congress bound to ratify it? Have the people of any territory, whatever, the right of admission as States, even provided their Constitution be republican? If so, when, and how does that right arise? How numerous must be their population? Would a newly-conquered territory, that might secede next day, have the right of admission? Would a territory settled by Chinese have such right? Would a territory settled by robbers and fugitives from justice, be entitled to admission? Is it not plain that Congress can prescribe when and on what terms new States shall be admitted? Why take the vote of Congress at all, if every one is bound to vote aye?

Congress has the right to admit or not admit, as it pleases, and we cannot conceive of any possible reason so strong for refusing to admit, as the fact, that the proposed Constitution was notoriously framed contrary to the views and wishes of a majority of the people of the Territory, and the Convention were attempting to make a cat's-paw of Congress to palm off upon an indignant people, a Constitution which they would be sure to reject or to change so soon as it returned to them. We have little doubt the President will express his opinion on this matter just as freely as any other citizen of the country, and that his opinion will be condemnatory of any course of procedure that deprives or attempts to deprive the people of Kansas of the right of forming their own Constitution. We have as little doubt that Congress will reject any Constitution not previously submitted to the people.

The party who would have the Convention take this snap judgment, know very well that if the Constitution should be ratified by Congress, it would be indignantly rejected, and substituted by another by the people of the State of Kansas. They know very well it would add tenfold to sectional hate, and render Black Republicanism forever preponderant and politically omnipotent at the North. Why, then, do they desire such a course? Is it to dissolve the Union, or to break down Governor WISE? Or is it in order to achieve both purposes?

National man as Governor WISE is, and ever has been, known and respected as such throughout the nation, unfortunately for these extremists, when the crisis seemed about to come, he was a league ahead of any Hotspur of the South. The South will never forget his proposed convention of Southern Governors, and his trip to North Carolina. Governor WISE loves his whole country—but detests abolition, and will not submit to abolition rule. Whilst the Union lasts, he stands preëminent, both in words and in deeds, as the champion of the South—of the South when traitors assail and threaten her.

Now, as Mr. WISE can neither be assailed as a National Democrat or as a steadfast friend of the South, what remains for the extremists and malcontents to do? Why, they would, we suppose, carve out a little republic of their own—a republic of the cotton-growing States; for there is among them an obvious disposition to cut Virginia and all the other border States, although Virginia has more slaves than any State in the Union; and although she and the other border States, by their vote, in the recent Presidential election, showed themselves as true to the rights of the South as the growers of rice, of sugar, or of cotton. Not only did these States show themselves true to the institution of Slavery, but, exceeding the line, and we find for a hundred miles or more north of it, our neighbors were sound on this subject. The cause of Slavery is gaining ground daily in Europe and America. The debates in the British Parliament prove this. The Coolly and African immigration and apprentice trades of France and England prove it! Our recent elections of the North, too, display abolitionism in a moribund condition. The present mercenary crusade against the free laborers and harmless to our slaves—will give the monster the coup de grace.

Whereupon, these men who wish, we suppose, to dissolve the Union at all events, are determined to get up new sectional issues to achieve their purpose. This Kansas device would be an excellent plot if they could carry it out; but, unfortunately for them, the people of Kansas contemptuously spurned their intermeddling or dictation. They exhausted their lungs in abusing Gov. WALKER for his administration of Kansas affairs, while his Pro-Slavery constituents sustained him with zeal and unanimity. They would now dictate to the Convention, and have it violate the will of the People of Kansas, and outrage all Democratic sentiment and principle. The Convention will contemptuously repudiate their advice. The fire-eaters will not dissolve the Union this time.

We cannot conclude without expressing our confident belief, that these Sectionists are but a handful in the cotton States. The people of those States are true to the Union, so long as it can be preserved on equal and honorable terms. He is a traitor to the South who would preserve it a day longer.

The McGee County Frauds to be Repudiated—Judge Cato and Gov. Walker.

From the St. Louis Republican.

LAWRENCE, K. T., Wednesday, Oct. 21, 1857.

Matters are quiet in town, and a better feeling prevails towards the Governor and Secretary.

Fraudulent returns have been received from McGee County, at Lecompton, adding over a thousand names to the list, and giving those votes to Ramsey and the Pro-Slavery candidates for the Legislative Assembly. These returns bear internal evidence of fraud, and fraudulently efface themselves; as they have failed to designate the votes for which they several candidates were voted for. A protest was filed yesterday, signed by several citizens of that district, and sworn to, setting forth that there are not fifty adult white male citizens of the United States residing within the County of McGee; that the said County belongs to the Cherokee Indians; that there are no white residents there but agents and missionaries; that the Indian title has been extinguished to no part of the said McGee County, and that it was specially reserved by the organic act out of the Territory of Kansas, and constitutes no part of it, and that, any elections held there, have no more effect upon the people of Kansas than have those held in Missouri or Arkansas. I am credibly informed that the Governor and Secretary will reject these returns, and will give certificates of election to the Free-State members.

The following document was designed to be served on Gov. WALKER and Secretary STANTON yesterday. A deputy of Butchers, the late Sherif, called on them to serve the writ, and left a copy. The Governor politely informed the deputy that his principal's term of office expired the day previous, as his successor, Capt. WALLACE, was qualified on that day; and that he would not accept service from other than a legal officer. The writ is as follows:

"TERRITORY OF KANSAS—To ROBERT J. WALKER, Governor of Kansas Territory, and FREDERICK P. STANTON, Secretary of the same, Greeting:

Whereas, Samuel J. Jones, William Hall, Hiram Bledsoe, J. H. Danforth, John F. Eaton, L. S. Belling, A. P. Walker, William S. Wells, J. C. Thompson, Thomas B. Sykes, and U. B. Windsor, have been elected members of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Kansas, to wit; the above first three named as members of the Council, the remainder as members of the House of Representatives of the said Assembly, appointed by law to meet on the first Monday of January, A. D. 1858, for the Counties of Johnson and Douglass, of the said Territory, to wit: on the 5th and 6th days of October, 1857, and ought to be commissioned as Councilmen and Representatives thereof; nevertheless, you, being ignorant of the premises, but disregarding your duty therein have not only refused, though thereto required by the said members elect, to grant them their certificates of election, but yet do refuse so to do in contempt of us, and to the great damage of the said members elect, as by their complaint we have understood. We, therefore, being willing that speedy justice should be done in their behalf, do command and enjoin you that immediately after the receipt of this writ, you do cause the said members elect to be granted their certificates of election, and do signify the cause to us why you cannot or will not grant the certificates as aforesaid, lest in your default complaint should again come to us, and how you have executed this writ, make known to us at Lecompton on the 20th day of October, A. D. 1857, and have you then and there this writ.

"Witness my hand and seal this 20th day of October, A. D. 1857. STERLING G. CATO,

"Judge 3d Judicial District, Kansas Territory."

The writ, it will be seen, was not directed to any ministerial officer, but the Governor and Secretary are ordered to make service and return. The Governor looked upon it as a farce and treated it as such. He declared he would do his duty and what was right, independent of any threats or menaces which might be brought to bear upon him.

I understand that S. J. Jones, Ex-Sheriff of Douglas County, sent a challenge to Mr. Stanton yesterday. It is thought by some that the parties will meet, though it is to be hoped not.

A Free-State man came near being shot in Lecompton yesterday. A drunken rowdy ran through the streets saying "Any man who indorsed JIM LANE was a liar, a coward and a thief." Approaching a Free-State man he inquired whether he indorsed LANE. The latter answered in the affirmative. The latter drew a pocket pistol, and snapped it at the Free-State *man. Fortunately it missed fire, but the next mo*ment the assailant was rolling in the dust. A crowd gathered round, and soon the difficulty was quieted.

It is reported in Lecompton that a negro, who had absconded from the vicinity, was seen yesterday in Topeka, and efforts were made to take him, when the citizens interfered and prevented. A lot of rowdies went up to Topeka last night, resolved to capture the negro or die. Difficulty may grow out of it.

Major SHERMAN, with his entire command, who has been encamped a mile out of Lawrence for the past few weeks, has been removed to Lecompton, probably to protect he Constitutional Convention.

Governor WALKER is quite indisposed. He is stopping with *Secretary STANTON, two miles east of Le*compton. The fatigue and excitement of the last week or two has been for him too much for him. I am happy to state that last evening he seemed to be improving, and was confident he would be up again in a day or two.

The weather is calm and beautiful, but the nights are frosty. Yours, truly, X.

THE REIGN OF ROWDYISM IN BALTIMORE.

The City to be Placed Under Martial Law.

PROCLAMATION OF GOVERNOR LIGON.

Correspondence Between the Governor and Mayor.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Oct. 29.

Gov. LIGON issued a proclamation this morning placing the City under Martial Law, and ordering out two divisions. Some 7,000 men and their commanding officers are ordered to enrol at once and report for service by Saturday, and hold themselves in readiness to preserve the peace on Wednesday next, the day of the general election. The Governor takes this step against the desire of the Mayor, but at the request and on the representations made by respectable citizens. Considerable feeling was aroused this morning by the proclamation. There is great diversity of opinion in regard to the measure, many considering it justified by existing circumstances, while others look upon it as most unwise, and calculated to increase the difficulties apprehended on election day.

The following is the document in full:

PROCLAMATION

BY THE GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND.

I, T. WATKINS LIGON, Governor of the State of Maryland, hereby make this proclamation to the citizens of Baltimore:

Having been credibly informed by a large and respectable number of citizens of Baltimore that serious apprehensions are entertained that the approaching general election is threatened with extreme violence and disorder in this city, sufficient to terrify and keep away from the polls many peaceable voters, unless the civil arm is vigorously interposed for their protection; and being fully convinced of the justness of this apprehension from the events of the elections of 1856 and of the recent municipal election in the city, I have felt it my duty to repair to this city to fulfill my constitutional obligations to afford to the citizens the faithful observance of the laws. Accordingly I have addressed the Mayor of the city, and solicite this coöperation in adequate measures for the protection of the peace of the city. So far I have received from him no satisfactory response, and being resolved to be involved in no failure of duty by postponing measures which can only be efficiently carried out under the circumstances, by the greatest promptitude, I HEREBY PROCLAIM to the citizens of Baltimore that, in virtue of my powers and duties under the Constitution and laws of the State, I have directed the proper military officers to enroll and hold in readiness their respective corps for active service at once, and especially on the approaching day of election, and I have issued to them full instructions to preserve the peace of the city, and secure to the legal voters their rights against the violence and intimidation of the lawless ruffians who have disgraced the city and outraged the elective rights in the recent election.

In thus acting I have sought merely to discharge my duty and insure to the citizen the rights pledged to him by the Constitution and the laws, and I earnestly invoke the moral support and aid of all good citizens who value their Government and its privileges. Especially do I forewarn all persons against all illegal conduct in the obstruction of voters, and admonish them of the serious responsibility which awaits the infraction of the law. It is to be seen if Republicanism is adequate for its own protection. The Governor confidently relies on the loyalty of the citizens of this great metropolis, and in the hearty readiness with which they will coöperate in the vindication of the city and State from any ignominious submission to lawless ruffians. If they do all, parties will rejoice in the triumph of Government, and every good man in the conviction that the pledges of the Constitution are not an empty mockery. At all events, the Governor will do his duty; if constitutional authority and law are not upheld and vindicated, the responsibility must rest elsewhere. But there is no reason to fear any adverse result. The Governor will not mention the helpfulness of the military arm, or doubt its ability for any emergency that may arise. *The military officers with whom I have con*sulted express their readiness to serve the State, and I have no doubt of their sufficiency for the occasion; and good citizens may confidently trust that their title to a constitutional Government will be fully redeemed. Let all citizens, therefore, exercise their rights, abstain from disorder and violence, and trust in the genius of the Constitution and the laws.

Let no man leave the precincts of his own Ward, unless ordered to do so by competent authority. Thus he will promote the fairness of the election and avoid the just retribution that will be dealt to those vagrant emissaries of disorder who wander from polls to polls for the purpose of illegal voting, and to deter peaceable citizens from the exercise of their rights. But it is the sincere hope of the Governor that the majesty of the law, supported by the countenance of good citizens, will make the ensuing election a signal triumph to those who believe in the capacity of the people for self-government.

Given under my hand, at the city of Baltimore, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

T. WATKINS LIGON.

By the Governor,

J. PINKNEY, Secretary of State.

ORDER NO. 1.

Major-General GEORGE H. STEUART, commanding 1st Lieut. Division, M. V.—You are hereby ordered to hold your entire command ready for immediate service, fully equipped, and report to me at noon on Saturday next. T. WATKINS LIGON.

ORDER NO 2.

HEAD-QUARTERS M. M., BALTIMORE, Oct. 28, 1857.

JOHN SPEAR SMITH, Major-General 2d Division, M. M.—You are hereby ordered to enroll and embody, without delay, six regiments of not less than six hundred men each, (to be officered and equipped,) and hold the same in readiness for service by noon on Saturday next, and report to me.

T. WATKINS LIGON.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY—CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN THE GOVERNOR AND THE MAYOR.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Oct. 29—4 P. M.

Governor LIGON's proclamation has produced quite a sensation and some excitement. An extra has been published, giving the correspondence between the Governor and the Mayor. The latter objects to any interference by the Governor in the Government of the city, and says in conclusion:

As Mayor of the city of Baltimore, I hold my commission directly from the people, and am accountable to them for the manner in which I discharge my trust. The office which I have been called upon to assume was conferred upon me without solicitation, and will be laid down whenever it shall be made to appear that I have lost the confidence of those whom it has been my endeavor to serve. I can recognize subordination to no other power within the sphere of my duty. I deemed it due to courtesy to afford your Excellency the amplest information in regard to the matters to which you refer in your letter, and now invite from you any reliable evidence, upon which I can legally act, of a combination on the part of any of our citizens to obstruct the laws at the ensuing election.

But while I am thus frank in foreshadowing my plans for the preservation of the public peace, and the protection of the voter by every means at my command, I must be equally so in declining to recognize any joint administration of affairs for this city. The powers of the Mayor are believed to be ample; he has his resort, in a case of emergency, to the civil posse as well as to the military arm, which, like the former, is placed by law under his control. It will be his duty to use his best endeavors to see that every citizen is protected in his constitutional rights, and that the peace of the city is preserved by the means at his disposal. If, however, it should be attempted to introduce a power in the city of Baltimore above that of its regularly-constituted authorities, or if power should be assumed in the anticipation of a state of things which may yet occur, to bring the military in contact with the people on the day of election without an official requisition on the part of the local authorities, I can only express the sincere belief that such a policy might seriously endanger the peace of the city, and lead to consequences which it should be the duty of all good citizens to an issuer if possible to avert. (Signed) THOMAS SWANN, Mayor.

The Governor, in reply to the Mayor, says, among other things, as follows:

SIR: I have just received your reply to my letter of yesterday, and beg to say that your views of our respective powers and duties do not accord with my own. Clothed with authority to see that the laws are executed throughout the entire State, I cannot comprehend how the city of Baltimore or its Mayor recognized "no subordination to the State Executive." His power is created by the Constitution; that organic instrument also defined his duties. Has the Mayor of Baltimore any coördinate position in that character, or are not his authority and that of his city the mere endowments of ordinary legislation? I am mortified and pained to notice that spirit in a municipal agent, which if generally carried out would subvert the whole theory of our institutions and is jealous rivalry among the chiefs of officials. I will not now indulge in any protracted refutation of an error which must rather be the growth of official sensibility than of mistaken conceptions of constitutional position. The natural result of such an error is the further implication that my powers and duties are to be estimated by the capacity of the discretion of municipal subordinates. Do you thus await the application of your subordinates? If not, why? Simply because you are sworn to see the laws executed, and whilst in general you confide in the fulfillment of their duties, you still hold in reserve those powers of supervision which are made necessary by the fact that these subordinates may not recognise their own defaults, and their serious bearing on the general welfare. Is not the city filled with clubs of lawless and violent partisans, whose very appellatives brandish defiance at order, and make the peaceable prefer to surrender their rights rather than claim them at the risk of life? Sir, is there no law and no authority somewhere to curb one class and shield the other? If the ordinary civil power of the city is insufficient, what is the inevitable deduction? Is it not better that you should admit its inadequacy, and be cordially grateful that the Constitution has supplied other powers and permitted, for your aid, that Executive to interfere, who has not been at all complicated in past animosities? You mention, in your communication, that one of your police was "murdered" at a recent election. What guaranty is there that a similar occurrence may not happen again at the approaching elections unless more adequate arrangements are prepared for the suppression of lawlessness? I have not come here to empower assaults upon your police, but to protect them, and invigorate every arm that will be since rely extended in behalf of individual security and constitutional liberty. And I feel that it is a circumstance of just mortification that a State Executive, who has repaired to a city in which the Press has not hesitated to declare that the recent election was a "mockery" from intimidation to voters, should be asked by its municipal head to furnish him with any reliable evidence upon which I can legally act, of of a combination on the part of any of our citizens to obstruct the laws at the coming election. It is to be deeply regretted that we should be at all separated in the performance of duties for insuring to citizens his legal rights, which violence has thus far overawed, and that you decline to "recognize any joint administration of the affairs of this city," when I tender you executive coöperation. This fearful responsibility you have taken. I believe that a just-minded community will severely censure this false independence as not consistent with our relative official positions, or consonant with that spirit of union which should unite all good men against the bad and lawless. But, however this may be, I announce to you respectfully, that I shall, nevertheless, see that the laws are "faithfully executed," by every constitutional power.

The Mayor's reply is brief and laconic, as follows:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY HALL, BALTIMORE, Oct. 29, 1857.

To His Excellency T. Watkins Ligon, Governor of Maryland.

SIR:—I have had the honor to receive your letter of yesterday's date by the hands of your Secretary. I feel no disposition to discuss the relative powers of your office and mine, or the other points referred to in your letter. Your Excellency has thought proper to visit this city, and upon representations of its inhabitants have deemed there is sufficient cause to place its inhabitants under martial supervision. The responsibility is with your Excellency. In the exercise of my functions, I shall be governed by the usual city of law, and I trust by the support of the entire community.

With great respect, I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant,

THOMAS SWANN, Mayor.

Col. MCALLISTER, of the Rifle Regiment, embracing all the German companies, informed the Mayor that his regiment would be in readiness to obey the orders of the Mayor, but not to respond to the Governor's proclamation. Several officers have resigned, refusing to obey the Governor's orders.

The Conservative portion of the community denounce the action of the Governor as a partisan measure, ill-advised and calculated to produce mischief.

Boys are marching about the streets drilling with broomsticks, and it is evident that there are indications of turning the whole affair into ridicule.

Nearly a thousand stand of arms have recently been brought here from Washington.

The third division of Maryland Militia, one of the regiments ordered into service, has neither officers nor men, the intention of the Governor being to enroll and equip 3,000 men, orders for which have been given to General JOHN SPEAR SMITH.

NEW CABINET FORMED—THE REBELS IN THE SOUTH ROUTED.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Oct. 29.

By the arrival of the Southern mail we have New-Orleans papers of the 23d, as late as due.

The ship Criterion reports having seen a large ship, painted black, with a full poop, ashore on Moselle Shoal, Bahama Banks, on the 19th inst.

The following dispatch from our New-Orleans Agent evidently miscarried somewhere, as it is in some of the papers received by the mail, but did not come through by the telegraph.

"NEW-ORLEANS, Sunday, Oct. 25.—The steamship Tennessee has arrived from Vera Cruz, 21st, with advices from the City of Mexico to the 16th inst. She brought $250,000 in specie. A new Cabinet had been formed as follows:

Señor FUERNES, Minister of Foreign Affairs; JUAREZ, Minister of the Interior; RUIZ, Chief Justice; PAREO, Treasury. Señor COMBE had been appointed Minister to Nicaragua.

General ALVAREZ had routed the rebels in the South with great slaughter.

The whole coast of Yucatan was in the hands of the revolutionists."

Effects of the Storm.

GREAT DAMAGE ON THE LINE OF THE OGDENSBURG RAILROAD, ETC.

ROUSE'S POINT, Thursday, Oct. 29.

The heavy rain storm which commenced on Sunday and continued until Tuesday, has caused immense damage between this place and Malone. On the line of the Ogdensburg Railroad, the track is swept away in several places. No trains have passed since Monday, but it is hoped they will get through to-day. Several dams have been broken, and mills, dwellings, and bridges. The loss in Champlain village alone will exceed $30,000. No lives as yet have been reported as lost.

GREAT FRESHET IN THE AU SABLE RIVER.

KEESEVILLE, N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 29—A. M.

The heavy rains of Sunday and Monday have raised the Au Sable River sixteen feet above low water mark. In this village the swing bridge is destroyed, the bulkhead and flume gone from TEAL's grist mill, and also from N. KREZLER's axletree factory. The freshet swept off one trip hammer, a water-wheel gate, and threw down the river wall of a cabinet shop. The works of E. & J. D. KEMPLAND have escaped injury. Messrs. REDEAS & Co. lose 75,000 bushels of coal and a part of their aqueduct and bellows-house. TYLER & POTTER's store, with a large stock of goods, was swept off by the flood. Their loss is about $10,000. The works of the Peru Iron Company are but slightly damaged.

HEAVY FRESHETS AT THE EAST.

BOSTON, Thursday, Oct. 29.

Reports from the East mention heavy freshets, with considerable damage to bridges. The Kennebec River had risen eight feet. The Merrimac River yesterday forenoon had risen five and a half feet at Lowell, and was still rising. Some of the mills were troubled with back water. Bulkheads of fair weather last night were dispelled, and heavy rain continued

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

[illegible] Strasbourg—The [illegible] Trial of Pierre Bonny, Alias Pierre Vidal, Out of the [illegible] Bar—Its Exciting Incident. Paris [illegible] has its exciting incident. Paris [illegible] is the singular one. A young man of the age of [illegible] years and a half, having been contraried [illegible] one day by the cook of the family, a woman of [illegible] years, entered into the kitchen, seized a sharp-pointed knife, and approaching the woman, who was sitting down, plunged the knife into her with such [illegible] in the region of the heart, as to attain the organ and arrest its action almost instantaneously. It will be a curious spectacle, the trial of [illegible] little monster. While the President [illegible] the usual words, "Prisoner, what is your name? Your age? Your profession? Where do you dwell?" [illegible] that the result of the [illegible] there is danger that the [illegible] thinking the [illegible] wanting the [illegible] The Sun [illegible] France Bonny, in which case he will be threatened with the law of September, which excludes his presence from the Court. The journal which reports this case mentions also another, the murder of a shopkeeper by, or a young girl of seventeen, [illegible] he plagued her.

[illegible] before the courts of justice [illegible] of the Archbishop [illegible] years ago, this [illegible] young, was working with a still [illegible] the acquaintance, by a rare [illegible] Brazilian wedding in Paris. Her mistress, who was taken by the Brazilian as an accomplice, [illegible] the girl to his rooms with a letter. Once there, he shut her up, and did not allow her to [illegible] until he had accomplished her ruin. She became his mistress, and they lived together, with her mother's consent, until the assassination of the Archbishop, last January, when the Brazilian declared that he would no longer [illegible] any connection with such a family, and they [illegible]. Two children were the fruit of this [illegible], and the suit is one brought by the [illegible] possession of the children. Letters were shown by the lover, written to him by his mistress since the separation, which showed a fearful character of violence and depravity on her part; but on this ground the father claimed her [illegible] to take care of the children. But the Court took into consideration that he had been the probable cause of this depravity, and gave one child to each parent.

[illegible] is a fact exceedingly Frenchy. The great dry goods store under the Hotel du Louvre announces, in the editorial column of a journal, that [illegible] has been issued in that store that hereafter the clerks who show ladies up stairs will invariably precede instead of follow them. You will ask why this singular announcement? Because many ladies—you may be sure they were Americans or English—complain that the clerks followed a few steps behind in order to enjoy certain advantages afforded by their hoops! The owners of the store were perfectly right in giving this lesson of politeness to their clerks; but it was an odd advertisement for a journal all the same!

A friend told me a day or two ago a good anecdote of PHILIP RICORD, the distinguished surgeon of the Hospital du Midi. Ricord was sitting in one of the orchestra stalls at the Grand Opera—as he fashions he gets time to go there—and all at once, when the house was still, and in the midst of one of the songs of a principal baryton, he commenced clapping in the most approved style. Everybody looked at RICORD, but did not understand. As the singer grew warm and commenced [illegible], RICORD's enthusiasm [illegible] and other gentlemen at his side, [illegible] followed his example and applauded also. RICORD, turning around, briskly [illegible] to know what they were applauding for? "To tell you the truth, Sir," was the reply, "it was partly from your example." "But you don't know why I applauded," replied RICORD. "I [illegible] the most blood effects of the iodide of Potassium!" The singer was one of RICORD's patients, who had a very stiff joint, for which he had been taking for some time this remedy, and it was when RICORD saw the arm unbend itself in the declamation of the singer, that he broke out into such enthusiasm. His neighbors imagined [illegible] the use of the evening.

[illegible] entertainments in the United States are already losing great numbers of strangers who had otherwise intended to remain abroad for the Winter. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." One gentleman lost a sum of $30,000 not long since at Niblo's establishment.

Mr. PRESSENSÉ DENIÉS, Consul-General and charge d'affaires of the French Government at Hayti, has just died at Paris, after a lingering illness, contracted during his residence as Consul at San Francisco.

Madame RISTORI, the distinguished actress, has just concluded her series of representations at Madrid, and on the eve of departure was invited to a dinner by Marshal NARVAEZ, which was attended by all the Ministers and their wives, and by the Countess of Montijo, mother of the Empress of France.

Among the marriages in fashionable life this week are those of a niece of M. DE TOCQUEVILLE, author of Democracy in America, to the Marquis DE JULIY, and of M. OLLIVIER, lately elected Deputy to the Corps Législatif on the Republican ticket, to Mademoiselle LISZT, daughter of the great pianist.

Annexation of the Cocos Islands.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Oct. 28, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There are two groups of this name: one in the Indian Ocean, about five hundred miles west of the Straits of Sunda, and the other in Eastern Polynesia, near the Solomon group. The London Times, quoting from the Sydney Morning Herald, speaks of the former as having been lately annexed by the British Government; and yesterday you inserted in your columns a paragraph taken from the Moniteur de la Flotte, mentioning the [illegible] group as being the one annexed.

The French journal is in error. The Cocos group, near the Straits of Sunda, was taken possession of, a few months ago, by Captain FREMANTLE, of Her Majesty's ship Juno. These islands, of coral formation, lie not in a cluster, but in a chain, like a necklace, having a land-locked, lake-like sea within, to which there is only one [illegible] of moderate draught of water. [illegible] islands, covered with a luxuriant and fruitful forest, afford an affordable shelter [illegible] in the hurricane latitudes of the Mauritius, and will at all times serve as an invaluable coaling station for steamers bound to Australia and various points in the East Indian Archipelago.

[illegible] named ROSS, cruising in the Indian Seas in a small schooner, entered the fairy [illegible] (which have been the chosen abode [illegible] in classic times,) was enchanted with this ocean retreat, came to anchor, and [illegible] which is still his [illegible].

[illegible] to British authorities at Singapore [illegible] hoist British colors on the group, and place his dominions under the protectorate of the Empire; but the treaty of 1824, between Great Britain and Holland, which was supposed, to exclude the British from any future interference or [illegible] in the Indian Archipelago, was not [illegible] on behalf of the enterprise of the British subject, at that time as it was afterwards by Lord ABERDEEN, in his correspondence with M. DEDEL, the Dutch Minister, and more lately by the present Premier of England; and to ROSS was not then permitted to annex himself and territory.

ROSS, however, needing a flag, and believing the hoisting of an independent and unoccupied island might consign him to the doom of a pirate, next applied to the Dutch at Batavia, who gave him permission to hoist the Batavian tricolor, but neglected to send any official to the group and take formal possession.

In 1853 ROSS met with an American, who had been cruising in those seas. He offered to divide with him his territory in exchange for this American's vessel, supposing at the same time, at the American's suggestion, that they should hoist the American flag and make it an American Naval Dépôt and coaling station.

The Government at Washington has been appealed to again and again upon the subject during the last four years—not simply in reference to this particular point, but in reference to the general question of favoring the establishment of an American Naval station in the East Indian Archipelago.

It has been alternately favored and opposed;—the Government waiting, probably, till the public got interested, and a question was raised capable of influencing votes. ROSS and his people, nearly two hundred souls now, (mostly Coolies from Java,) getting tired of waiting for American protection, and Lord PALMERSTON showing a disposition adverse to the foolish Canning treaty, made by a relative of the present incompetent ruler in India, was [illegible] by ROSS and the necessary protection and countenance have been readily granted.

Whilst public attention is being directed to Continental India, let it be turned aside a little southeasterly, to the rich Indian Archipelago. There are islands, Borneo and New-Guinea, each one nearly as large as Hindostan proper, and richer in soil and productions, crying out to enterprise to be explored, possessed and "protected." There are inexhaustible coal fields and cotton fields. Borneo, New-Guinea and Sumatra can supply half the cotton the world needs, and all the spices, gums, drugs and coffee besides. American enterprise is longing to develope that fruitful field; but all that the Dutch cannot take care of must go a begging to the British for the want of a little interest being roused up amongst the politicians at Washington.

NATIONAL POLITICS.

Hon. Caleb Cushing on Kansas and the Slavery Question.

Hon. CALEB CUSHING made an elaborate and able speech at a Democratic meeting in Boston on Monday night last,—from which we make the following extract, discussing the Kansas question and the Dred Scott decision:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We all know there is a body of persons in this Commonwealth, who devote themselves to the idea of raising the black men in the United States to an equality of political rights with the white men. They are professional philanthropists, if the phrase be admissible, that is, men who pursue a philanthropic idea as their occupation, but wholly outside of political life; laboring to promote their idea by speech and writing, or by itinerant agitation, that is indirectly, by the influence on the minds of those who legislate, or who execute laws, not by direct participation of their own in legislation or administration. Of course, not cooperating with others in the practical business of Government, they are very much one-sided, dogmatic, violent in their language, and not sparing of personal criimination and denunciation of all the rest of the world, and especially of any others in society, who, differing from them either much or little, happen to be conspicuous in public affairs, or directly responsible for the legislation of the State, or the United States. In a word, they are impracticable zealots of a single idea.

That among them are men of eminently intellectual character, it would be absurd to deny. Such an one as Mr. THEODORE PARKER. That among them are eloquent persons also, it must be admitted, like Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS—although he injures his cause, and belittles himself, by the petulent personal vituperation which too frequently disfigures his discourse. They have strong-purposed men also, such as Mr. GARRISON, of the structure of mind that grasps an idea, and labors on through good and through evil report, to make that idea a fact.

These gentlemen have persuaded themselves that the emancipation of the slave laborers of the United States is an object paramount to all other human considerations. They know they have no legal capacity to act directly in the question. They perceive that the Bible is contrary to, or at least does not distinctly teach, their doctrines, and therefore they make no account of that. They are aware that the Constitution of the United States stands in their path, and therefore they would dissolve the Union. I believe Mr. PHILLIPS is, or recently was, conscientious, so to speak, on that project. In a word, they are enthusiasts of opinion, who would be efficacious agents of revolution, if living in a country where revolution is possible, and if their theories were susceptible of practical application to any machinery of government whatever.

I desire not to be understood as speaking of these gentlemen with personal disrespect. On the contrary, they seem to deserve the tribute of sincerity, at least; for, without they be sincere, how could it be that they would outlaw themselves, as it were, by their impartial hostility to all the political parties of the country, and by their avowed, nay, ostentatious warfare on the Constitution and the Union?

These gentlemen assume as theory, and seek to establish as law, the equality of Africans and Americans. It avails nothing to say to them that the two races are unequal by nature, and that no laws can make them equal in fact. Still they pursue their idea.

Of course, they aim to bring about the emancipation of the colored laborers of the South. And here it avails nothing to point to St. Domingo, and to Spanish America, and to the British West Indies, and to show that emancipation has proved a curse to the black and the white race alike, and that anarchy, barbarism and misery have followed it everywhere, even in the most favored regions of the New-World. Still they pursue their idea of emancipation in the United States.

To accomplish this, or at least to free themselves from association with slave labor, and as the only political means of attaining this object, they propose the dissolution of the Union, and the organization of a Northern Republic. We may tell them that such a Republic is impossible; that the attempt to organize it would be the signal of civil war, not between the North and South, but in the very heart of the North, with such of us as will contend in arms, on the spot, against any attempt to organize their separate Republic; that if such a Republic existed, it could not advance their purpose without they invaded the South with hostile armies; that the Middle States stand in the way of that; and, after all that, to kindle the flames of civil and servile war in the United States, appears to be rather questionable philanthropy. Still, we cannot move them from their purpose.

I think it is at the end of this series of considerations that we are to find the fact of the peculiar tone and style of resentfulness, anger, and measureless denunciation of the Southern States, and bitterness towards men at the North, which marks the speech and writing of the Abolitionists. They attack fiercely and they are attacked. Their idea is one of revolutionary change in the condition of the country, and it is condemned by others as warmly as it is urged by themselves. They disturb and prejudice important interests. Their political ardor has at length become aggravated by something of theological ardor, which is of proverbial intensity. And thus a state of feeling has been produced in the community, which, commencing with mere condemnation of negro-servitude, and desire of its abolition, has degenerated in some quarters into emotions of morbid jealousy, and even hatred of the people of the Southern States.

And that is the state of feeling and emotion in the North, and especially in Massachusetts, which aspiring public men seize upon, and seek to combine and consolidate as an instrument of political power by the newly-applied name of Republicanism.

I say aspiring men, not in the sense of reproach, but as a fact. Such men as Governor CHASE, of Ohio, Senator SEWARD, of New-York, Senator FESSENDEN, of Maine, Senator HALE, of New-Hampshire, Senator TRUMBULL, of Illinois, have the right of political aspiration, which belongs to their virtues and their talents. So have Senators SUMNER and WILSON, of Massachusetts, although, as between the two, Mr. SUMNER is more of a theorist, like the Abolitionists proper, and Mr. WILSON has more of the qualities and capabilities of a practical legislator. And so also has Mr. BANKS the right of aspiration, which the possession of talents and acquirements gives to him, as to any and every citizen of the Republic.

Now, it is obvious to see that Mr. BANKS, unlike the Abolitionists, looks to the seats of power as the means of acting on the events of the time, accepting time, and circumstances, as he finds them in history. Unlike the Abolitionists, he is a practical man, not a visionary theorist; he sees clearly, the impracticable nature of their ideas; he does not seem to be outlawed, in the estimation of his countrymen, by running a Quixotic tilt against the Constitution of the United States; on the contrary, he certainly prefers to have the Federal Government subsist in its integrity, with himself to participate in its administration.

Hence, it is the well-considered policy of Mr. BANKS, and of those with whom he is at present associated in political action, perhaps, I might say, it is the necessity of their position,—while holding aloof from visible cooperation with the Abolitionists,—while in fact resisting and condemning their aims and plans,—yet to exploit, as the phrase is in France, the sentiments sown by the Abolitionists in the community, and so to mount up to power.

Thus it has happened that the Republicans, and before them the Free Sollers, have made their issues, not on the Slavery question itself, but on some occasional and transitory incident of the Slavery question, for which reason they have been, and will continue to be, beaten successively on each of their issues, so as to produce the appearance, if not the fact, of a real reaction in favor of Slavery, and against Liberty, analogous to that which has occurred simultaneously in Europe.

I need only point, in proof of this, to the annexation of Texas, the Mexican war, the compromise acts of 1850, and the provisions of the act organizing the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas,—neither of them deciding any abstract principle touching the subject of Slavery, but each made to appear to do so, on account of the improvident issues raised upon them by a portion of the statesmen of the North.

Owing to these causes, although none of the statesmen referred to lend direct countenance to the wild schemes of mere Abolitionism, still, it may be doubted whether their line of action is not the cause of even greater perturbation of the public peace. The power of Abolitionism is paralyzed for evil as well as for good, by its recognized antagonism to the Constitution. But when statesmen unpatriotically play with the passions of Abolitionism, and thus impart to it force in the public mind, and come at length insensibly to be imbued with its sentiments, as well as to speak its language, then the current of legislation and of public affairs is disturbed by them, and positive injury is done to the best interests of the Union.

We have had exemplification of this in the controversy, which is just dying out, as to the organization of the Territory of Kansas.

By provision of an act of Congress, connected with the admission of the State of Missouri into the Union, and commonly called the Missouri Compromise, it was enacted that there should never be involuntary servitude in certain territory of the United States north of a prescribed parallel of latitude (36° 30'.) It of course admitted, and did in fact, according to the established rules of statutory construction, implicitly sanction by law Slavery south of that line. It in effect said, there may hereafter be slave labor south of the line—there shall not north of it. That was the compromise. On this ground it was opposed by some statesmen of the North, who desired to propagate free labor south of the line at the expense of the Southern States; and it was approved, and its extension to new territories advocated by others, as a measure of equal justice to the opinions of both sections of the Union.

In this position things stood until, in a series of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, it was determined that acts of Congress of this nature, restricting in advance the legislature power of a State, as to Slavery or anything else, are null and void, because contrary to the Constitution.

Thus it happened that, when the time arrived for establishing the Territory of Kansas, the Missouri Compromise had become a dead letter on the statute book. It had ceased to have legal vigor. Congress had no constitutional power to revive it by new enactment. To repeal it expressly was not an act of necessity, but of sincerity, of good faith, of frankness, of manliness; and it was done. Still, the express repeal changed nothing in the legal relations of the subject; it did but leave the question of Slavery, in the incipient state, just where, by the decision of the Supreme Court, it was placed—that is, in the hands of its people. That is the doctrine, not of squatter sovereignty, but of popular sovereignty, within the range of the limits of the Constitution.

We assume all the time, in our discussion of the Slavery question at the North, that free labor is more productive than slave labor; that it communicates more value to land; that it is more consonant with the nature of man; that it alone is moral and religious; and that the settled judgment of mankind is opposed to slave labor on principle. Assuming all this, it might be inferred that a new political community, with full power to judge for itself on the question, would exclude slave labor from its institutions. Especially might we so infer, if the new community consisted of men of the Northern States. In other words, it was perfectly clear that, however it might be if Kansas were colonized from the Southern States, yet, if colonized from the Northern States, it would certainly be a free-labor State. Its condition would depend on the source of its colonization.

Moreover, the line of the Missouri Compromise, as a line of division between free labor and slave labor States, ceasing to exist, it was perfectly clear that its obliteration would have the effect to open the whole region to the free competition of the two principles, and the result would be to extend slave labor, or to extend free labor, according to the respective capabilities of colonization of the two adverse principles, and of the States which they represent.

Now, in such an open competition and free race of colonization, which was likely to succeed—the slave labor or the free labor States? I say, the latter undeniably; as having the greater population in number, population more easily moved, and population backed by emigration from Europe.

For instance, suppose two adjoining closes, Black Acre and White Acre, each of the same number of roods in extent, and separated by a division fence, with 200 black sheep in Black Acre, and 200 white sheep in White Acre. If, now, we break down the division fence, and make common passurage of the two closes, and leave the sheep to take care of themselves, which will get the most feed out of the whole, which will occupy most of it, which will encroach on the other, the 200 white sheep, or the 200 black sheep? Is not the answer palpable, self-evident, impossible to escape? Is there any answer but one? And that is the question and answer of free labor extension or slave labor extension by the repeal of the Missouri Compromise.

In disregard to these manifest considerations, it was prematurely and hastily assumed, by certain of the statesmen of the North in the Senate, and they inconsiderately propagated the idea, that to leave the new Territory of Kansas open to the free competition of the two principles, was to extend Slavery; in other words they assumed that in all new territory, whatever the soil and climate, and under whatever circumstances, if the people were left free to act for themselves they would of course introduce slave labor; and that therefore the only salvation of the country consisted in tying the people's hands, in this respect, by act of Congress. Hence, the irritating, but sterile agitation on the subject of Kansas.

The same gentleman also propagated the idea that to repeal the Missouri Compromise was a breach of faith. But the power and the right, of any Congress, to repeal acts of general legislation, of any previous Congress, are so apparent,—it is so obviously absurd to put an act of Congress above the Constitution itself,—it is so contrary to all the principles of Republican government, to deny the moral right of the community to change its laws,—that the imputation of breach of faith, in the repeal, passed speedily into merited oblivion.

Such, in my humble judgment, are the merits of this greatly vexed question. That there have been disorders in Kansas,—illegal voting,—acts of individual violence,—is true; it was to have been expected from the circumstances,—not merely by reason of particular causes of disorder, which it would be invidious, and is not necessary to my purpose now to mention,—but, for the general cause, that much irritating demonstrations on both sides, between the Northern and the Southern States, for the colonization of Kansas. It was a struggle for power between adventurers in the Territory; it was a struggle for ascendency between two conflicting theories of social institutions; and it was a struggle of pride between opposite sections of the Union. Of course there were disorders; no human power could prevent that; President PIERCE did everything, to that end, which could constitutionally be done. But the magnitude of those disorders has been greatly exaggerated for effect. They have been much less in degree, less in political importance and effect, and less in the sacrifice of life, than those which have during the same period, taken place under our eyes in the State of Maryland, without exciting special wonder there, or being deemed worthy to be used as the instrument of pulling down, or putting up, Administrations of the National Government.

[illegible] these things in Kansas, and one of the operative causes of the disproportionate importance given to political controversy there, has been a great land speculation. The influential men of the whole country on the Slavery question—the discussion of Kansas in Congress, and in the State Legislatures—the making the election of President to turn upon it—corporations, committees, and subscriptions, North and South, in aid of Kansas—all these constituted such an advertising, such a puff after the manner of Barnum, of the lands of that Territory, as no previous land or other speculation in the United States had ever enjoyed.

In confirmation of my own conclusion on the subject, let me quote from a recent published address of a most unimpeachable witness. I mean Mr. EMERSON, of Tennessee, well known and highly commended at the North for his course on the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and in regard to the Slave-trade. Mr. EMERSON declares, in so many words, that Kansas, as connected with the Slavery question, was a humbug; that he never saw half a dozen intelligent Southern men who believed it would or could be a Slave State; and that, as to it, speculation in the public land had been, from the beginning, the main object of attraction, North and South.

I have not time, and it would be out of place to apply here to the many misrepresentations in the matter of Kansas, which have been applied to the acts of the last and of the present Administration. There is one point, however, which is interesting, and of immediate importance.

Much has been said of the bogus laws of Kansas, as the enactments of its Territorial Assembly are elegantly denominated in the choice phraseology of the day. The Republicans in Congress have uttered volumes of lamentation over these bogus laws, alleging that they were not genuine or obligatory, because of imputed irregularities and intruded votes at the election of the members of the Assembly. The refusal of the Republicans of Kansas to do any act under these laws, for more than a year, has been the chief immediate cause of disorder in the Territory. The professors of New-Haven, with singular ignorance of public law and common right, have been contending, not only that the existence of these laws was good cause of revolution, but that the President of the United States, the mere administrator of Constitution and law, was bound to patronize the revolution. Mr. BUCHANAN has disposed of that new chemical compound of theology and law.

Meanwhile, our fellow-citizen, Senator WILSON, naturally anxious about his agitation stock in Kansas, lately visited the Territory. He well knew that the agitation there was a bogus agitation, and he had the sense to see clearly that the cry of bogus laws was untenable, and, if persisted in, would but defeat his own friends. Accordingly, bogus laws to the contrary notwithstanding, he, as himself tells us in a recent speech, advised the Republicans of Kansas to go quietly to the polls and vote, under the bogus laws,—with a protest, as one pays unwilling duties at the Custom-House. They did so; and Kansas is a Free State. It would have saved the country some trouble, if Senator WILSON, or any other man of equal common sense, had thought of this protest some time ago, and had at an earlier period counselled the people of Kansas to cease playing the fool, and to cease to do so under protest, if they chose.

I ventured on a fit occasion not long since to suggest that our political troubles, in the United States, are not quite so serious as those of some other countries; and that, in view of the horrors perpetrated in British India, it is almost impious for us to be so very miserable about our little frontier affairs in Kansas, or Utah. I thought this was not only true, but a truism. Yet the suggestion has drawn from a respectable journal in Boston, and also from Mr. BURLINGAME, at the hustings, some very affecting remarks, concerning my hard-heartedness,—my want of charity for the sufferings of bleeding Kansas.

Now, Senator WILSON, in the speech just quoted, says that he promised, when in Kansas, to raise for them three or four thousand dollars, on his return to Massachusetts. But he says he has not been able to do this. Nay, he has canvassed Connecticut and New-York to the same end; and all New-England, with New-York besides, would not contribute three or four thousand dollars for bleeding Kansas. Senator WILSON was not, like our friend, Mr. HILLARD, in search of a party; that he had already, although it was in rather a shaky condition, as the recent popular demonstrations in Pennsylvania, Ohio and elsewhere show; but he was in search of a man with a heart,—to quote the expressive language of Mr. BURLINGAME. That man could not be found. So it appears I am not alone in hard-heartedness. All New-England and New-York, too, exhibit the same sort of hardness of heart towards bleeding Kansas.

Nay, we have now the speech of GERRIT SMITH—a soft-hearted man in these matters, if there ever was one—nay, a truly generous-minded, as well as very wrong-headed, gentleman. Mr. SMITH tells us that he has been bled for Kansas to his heart's content; that he has paid thousands of dollars on that score, without knowing what has become of it, or perceiving that it has done any good; and that he is resolved to cease to bleed for bleeding Kansas.

On the whole, therefore, I feel consoled, and shall adhere to my original belief, that the troubles in Kansas are not half so grave as the troubles in British India. Nay, I shall come to the conclusion, under the personal experience of Mr. GERRIT SMITH, and the failure of Senator WILSON to raise four thousand dollars, for Kansas, in New-York, and all New-England, that there may be good people in Massachusetts, needing my charity much more than the Borrio-boola-ga of Kansas.

My fellow-citizens, that "Morgan" is used up—it will not even keep good "until after election."

The same fate has overtaken the dreadful case of DRED SCOTT. It was deemed so hard to have it decided that he was not a citizen of the United States. Lawyers forgot that so it had been decided, and uniformly understood and practiced, long ago, in the administration of the Government. Good men forgot that the case of the Indians was the same, and even harder, for they, at any rate, are native-born Americans by an indefeasible title than the Africans. But there remained to DRED SCOTT, and the men of his color, as we have already seen, the warm sympathy and support of the free-labor States. They cannot compensate, if not correct the cruelty of the Supreme Court, by their own well-administered tenderness; they could declare Africans to be citizens of their State, and invest them with the elective franchise,—a much more important privilege than that of being a suitor in the District or the Circuit Court. Have they done this? By no manner of means. On the contrary, since then the free State of Michigan has excluded blacks from citizenship; the free State of Iowa has done the same; and, most cruel stab of all—not from "the enemies Chaos," but from thee, Brutus—the Topeka Constitution of Kansas, the embodiment of Republican philosophy and Republican philanthropy, not content with disfranchising the Africans, has actually expelled them from the State.

I supposed, after this, that we should hear no more of DRED SCOTT. It seems, however, that the main point of his case is still misunderstood, namely: the relation of the decision to the Free States. As to that, suffice it to say that the opinion of the Chief Justice, and especially that of Justice NELSON, have for their legal effect, not to impose the laws of Missouri on Massachusetts, but to determine absolutely, in consonance with all theory of public right and of liberty, that Missouri, like Massachusetts, has the sole constitutional power to determine the legal condition of persons within the State.

Fellow-citizens, you thus perceive that there has been a complete break-down of those elaborately constructed platforms of discord, upon which, for the last two or three years, the Republicans have agitated the United States.

[Mr. CUSHING proceeded to make a detailed examination of certain positions assumed by Mr. BANKS in regard to the financial policy of the Democratic Party, and denied his assertion that our finances and tariff arrangements had been made in the interest of the slave power—after which he went on to say:]

Yes, men of Massachusetts, I say that line of narrow sectionalism of thought, and the set of narrow ideas which appertain to it, have had their day. It has come to pall on the sense, and revolt all good sentiment. Massachusetts feels instinctively that her mind is capable of better uses than to be perpetually secreting poison from the blessings of nature and society; picking flaws in the institutions of the country, and regarding the United States in the little, through inverted telescopes. We are not all of us here in Massachusetts artribilarious, hypochondriac, with sour humors in the blood, causing us to see black objects dancing before the mind's vision by day and by night. We do not believe as from the loud assumptions of a particular school, and their busy activity at conventions and in public assemblies, it might be inferred we do, that all religion, all integrity, all honesty, [illegible] in being a cordial hater of the rest of the United States.

No, gentlemen of the Republican Party, I defy you to establish, permanently, in this Commonwealth, that impious policy of rancorous and vindictive hatred of all the white men of the South, and of all the white men of the North who refuse to join you in the hatred of the South. You may obtain power in the State of Massachusetts from time to time, but never by your own strength. You are not a majority of the citizens of the State; you are not even a plurality. It is only by a series of unstable coalitions with other parties, each succeeding one more deceptive and transitory than the last, that you ever rise even to the appearance of power. And such power as you may attain here will prove but apples of Sodom in your mouth; for the hypothesis on which you proceed will never allow you to reach that which all the higher aspirations of your public life look to—power in the United States. You may be the idol of a sectional or local party, but with a weight on its shoulders, like the rock of Sisyphus, to keep you toiling in vain to reach the bright summits of

"The steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar."

You may be great in a single State, but with a greatness which looms out hridly from the mists and gloom of sectional discord and strife,—and with names never destined to swell the pealing anthem of the glories of the United States.

God grant that in these things a better spirit may hereafter prevail among all the citizens of this State; that instead of giving themselves up to sectional agitation, and to the propagation of ideas which are sterile of any possible fruit save civil war—they would cultivate concord and harmony. May so many clergymen, now the ministers of discord and strife, go back to the pure ministry of the Gospel.

And Mr. BANKS himself, so capable of better things, let us entreat, in the earnest language of FRANCESCA to PAUL ARIMINI, to pause, ere he devote himself to an "immortality of ill," as the irreclaimable enemy of the unity and peace of the United States. Oh, that he had but chosen the nobler part! How much better and purer the honors he then might win. Of those men of Massachusetts who, in our time, have been called by Providence to places of higher power in the Federal Government, ADAMS, WEBSTER and CURTIS have gone to occupy each his bright page in the golden book of the names of the great men of the country whose memory death hallows; three only, EVERETT, BANCROFT and another, have held embassies or served in the Cabinet; three only, CHOATE, EVERETT and WINTHROP, have represented their State in the Senate; and of the small number of surviving men of Massachusetts, of similar political position, all but one have stepped over that line which divides the past from the future, and are now far removed from the fresh years of life. How few the obstacles to the advancement of a younger aspirant in the same path! How unwise in a Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States to seek to hurry advancement by the endeavor, vain, let us hope, to rekindle, in Massachusetts, the expiring embers of ill-will toward our fellow-citizens of the Southern States!

I feel admonished that it would be unreasonable to trespass much longer on your indulgence. I hasten, therefore, to a conclusion.

Gentlemen of the Young Men's Democratic Association, you belong to that great party which now stands alone in its glory, as the refuge of constitutional opinion, and as the depository of the hopes of the American Union.

In the Federal Government you have at the head of public affairs, a statesman of approved wisdom, experience and patriotism, eminent in all the capabilities demanded by his high station, and who, with the aid of a Cabinet of wise, experienced, and patriotic men, is administering the Government in the spirit of the Fathers of the Republic. Him you are proud to honor,—him, you can, with emulous respect, hold up to the confidence and support of your fellow-citizens of the State.

For the administration of the State, you have, in BLACK and CURRIER, candidates worthy, by the admission of all, of your cordial adhesion, and fitted, in all things, to do honor to Massachusetts. Let no doubts of success—no timid calculation of other contingencies—cause you to swerve a hair's breadth from the straight line of duty. Labor untiringly for the day—near at hand, it is to be hoped, and if not near, yet assuredly not remote—when the Commonwealth shall rejoice to put her welfare in their hands, and assume her own fit place in the direction of the affairs of the Union.

The Commonwealth needs their services. Its disordered finances—the intolerable burden of its expenditures—the misdirection of its counsels—require the remedy of a Democratic administration, alike in the Executive Chamber and its Legislative Halls. Nothing less can restore its lost position and its lost self-respect.

To conclude, then: Merchants of Massachusetts, with your superb galleons from the ship-yards of East Boston and Newburyport, moving over the sea in the pride of their beauty and their strength, freighted with the rich agricultural productions of Carolina and Louisiana, you have been told here that your interests are in conflict with those of the South! Manufacturers of Massachusetts! you, with your palatial manufactories to weave into apparel for the world's wear, the agricultural productions of Georgia and Alabama, have been told here that you must surrender yourselves to the evil spirit of jealousy of the South. Citizens of Massachusetts! and especially you of the industrial classes, who wear the cotton, eat the corn and sugar, and drink the coffee of slave-labor, and who provide objects of art for the use of slave labor, and of those who own it—you also have been told that slave labor is the irreconcilable antagonist of free labor, and that, therefore, leaving all other things, you must betake yourself to hating the South, with a sworn hatred, like that of ANNIBAL for Rome. Men of Massachusetts! you are exhorted to cultivate amicable relations with Cuba—slave colony though it be—to supply it with lumber, food and other objects of value, and to buy and consume its products, and thus to sustain and perpetuate slave labor here, and here alone extant, while you are called upon to sacrifice the peace and honor of the States and dedicate yourself, from vituperation of slave labor, to unceasing hostility against your own countrymen of the Southern States.

When I hear such counsels darkly intimated, under spacious disguises of speech, to the State of Massachusetts, it seems to me that the Ghost Tarquin, as depicted by MALTON, is before my eyes:

"Come at the call of Rome,
Emerging by an Erebian art to speak
The ordeal of her fancy, and with them Sings
Rhadam, as he the phantasms and dreams,
Or if, hastening venom, he might take
The animal spirits, that from pure blood arise,
Like gentle dreams from rivers pure, thence raise
At least distempered discontented thoughts,
Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires,
Blown up with high conceits, engendering pride.

My friends, to dispel such mischievous inspirations, it needs but the lightest touch of Ithuriel's spear of truth.

I say down, down to the infernal pit, where they belong, with all these derelict inspirations of malice, hatred and uncharitableness! You, the people of Massachusetts, do not, in the inner chamber of your heart, approve, and will not, on consideration, adopt this abominable theory of sectional spite and hate. You will, in the end, if not to-day, repel that policy with scorn and horror. Before that time of sober judgment comes, I, who stand up for the Union, in its letter and spirit,—who will die in the breach rather than "let it slide,"—I may be struck down by the tempest of party passion, but others, better and more fortunate, will rise up to fill the gap in the ranks of the sacred phalanx of the soldiers of the Constitution. Man is feeble, mortal, transient; but our Country is powerful, immortal, eternal. In the long ages of glory which lie before us, rolling onward one after another like the ceaseless note of the surging waters on the sea-shore, wave upon wave rushing on to fill the place of that which sinks into the main, generations of men will come and go, with their joys and sorrows, their aspirations and disappointments, their conflicts and their reconciliations. Then it will be seen that he who was the highest had been but an atom of the great whole, and he who was humblest had been as much. We are alike in the hands of the Almighty, and but the instruments of His will in the doing of the great work commenced by our Fathers at Jamestown and Plymouth,—continued by them at Saratoga and Yorktown,—carried on by us at Monterey and Mexico,—the great work of reducing to cultivation and civilization the Savannahs and forests of our country. Massachusetts, once the banner State of the Union, will not be found backward, at the hour of need, in performing her appointed part of that great work of the Lord God in the New World.

JEROME WHITE was shot in Baltimore, on Thursday, by Mr. JOHN CAGENY. Mr. CAGENY was arrested and sent to jail. Mr. WHITE died in a few minutes, and was taken to his residence in High-street. He knew nothing after being shot. One ball entered through the right arm, and was supposed to have passed into the chest. Another ball passed into the left arm and through, another ball went into the right thigh above the knee and through that.

The important interview at Stonyport is said to have had one result—the issue of a circular by Count WALEWSKI to the French Ambassadors at the different Courts of Europe, without either positively denying or affirming the existence of any formal State document, there much [illegible] a communication of some sort has been made. And there is reason to believe that, after announcing the fact of a complete entente cordiale as established between France and Russia, a resolution to maintain by all possible means the peace of Europe, and that every endeavor should be made to bring about a good understanding among all the European Powers, was resolved upon.

A horrible scene (says the Wiener Zeitung) took place at Hanover a few days ago, on the occasion of an execution. Not only did a large crowd, many of them carrying [illegible], assemble and commit gross [illegible] number of individuals subject to epilepsy [illegible] the scaffold, at the moment the criminal had fallen, to drink the blood, the popular belief being that it is a cure for epilepsy, and the executioner [illegible] gave it to them. This frightful scene has caused an immense sensation in Hanover, and [illegible] the Government, praying that executions may no longer be public, have been numerously signed.

A Literary Convention has been held between England and Spain. By this treaty the authors of works of literature or of art, to whom the laws of either of the two countries do not yet give the right of property, or to whom they hereafter give the right of property, or the right, will be entitled to enjoy the same in the territories of the other of such countries [illegible] same term and to the same extent as authors of works of the same nature, if published in the other country, would therein be entitled to enjoy similar such rights.

Every effort is now being made at the Navy-yard, Milwaull, for the launching of the new Eastern steamship. Large bodies of men are constantly employed in relays, and there is every [illegible] of forwardness for which she appears therein no doubt that she will be launched on the appointed day, the 24 of November.

A Paris letter, in the Nord, of Brussels, affirms that neither Prince ALBERT will visit this year the camp of Chalons, nor Queen VICTORIA Fontainebleau or Compiègne, on account of the preoccupations caused by the events in India.

Letters brought by the Overland Mail to Southampton, state that the Dutch in Java are alarmed at the aspect of affairs in India, as it may have an exciting effect upon the native population.

What Shall be Done for the Poor?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The importance of this question has probably never been so generally felt in this community as at present. Even those who have been compelled to witness, within a few weeks, the fearful results of care and toil swept from them, join in the inquiry.

Now that the severity of the financial calamity is somewhat abated, and time is given for each to look about himself and inquire its cause, no doubts but that it might have been averted. [illegible] supinely and lamend past shortsightedness to the part of wisdom, but to raise and gather up the fragments of the wreck, at the same time [illegible] guarding against other and greater evils.

There is now a little lull in the storm, but it is over; it may come from another quarter, and [illegible] will with unabated severity. The wreck we now [illegible] left to contemplate is only that of property [illegible] a few years, may be repaired, while the [illegible] are called upon to avert is that of character.

New-York can better afford to part with a dollar of its treasured millions than with the [illegible] of its laboring, its wealth making classes. The [illegible] of this integrity is the evil with which we are threatened; and, in comparison with this, [illegible] of small account. Every hand now idle, which has accustomed to find employment in this [illegible] will again be wanted, but of what avail will [illegible] hands be, if the hearts of their possessors have sacrificed to vice and crime, to ebb out and [illegible] through months of idleness?

There are at the present time, in New-York, its vicinity, from twenty-five to fifty thousand [illegible] classes out of employment, and every week [illegible] ments their number. This determination [illegible] climb the vast hordes of vagrants, [illegible] abandoned women, and thieves; by which, [illegible] the best of times, our City is infested. [illegible] manage to live

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Protective journals are begging and pleading for protection in New-England not to discharge their operatives, in other words, after preaching Free-trade for a long series of years, and bringing the business into utter ruin, they are now asking the owners of our factories to retain their workmen, which they have not already been compelled to discharge, and to further involve the property of stockholders with additional burdens. Notwithstanding upwards of 1830 to 1834, and from 1842 to 1846, more than one-half of all the iron made in the country was from foreign ore, and the average price of pig iron was $18 per ton, nine factories out of every ten were then bankrupt, or changed hands at 66 per cent.,

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The City of Baltimore is to be placed under martial law. Governor Lowe yesterday morning issued a proclamation to this effect, and ordered out two divisions of troops. About 7,000 men and their commanding officers are ordered to enroll at once and report for service by to-morrow, and hold themselves in readiness to preserve the peace on the day of the present election, which takes place on Wednesday next. This step is taken contrary to the desire of the Mayor, but at the desire of a number of citizens. A great degree of excitement has been aroused in the city by the movement, and a correspondence has taken place between the Mayor and the Governor on the subject. We publish the documents under our telegraphic head.

By the arrival of the Tennessee at New-Orleans we receive later news from Mexico. It is announced that President Comonfort has at last completed forming his new Ministry. From the political tendencies of the men chosen we infer that they will all favor a proposition to give dictatorial powers to the President while the present disturbed state of the Republic continues. General Alvarez had routed the rebels at the South, and communication between Acapulco and the Capital. Yucatan was in possession of the revolutionists. The Tennessee brought $300,000 in specie.

The Democracy of the City and County of New-York crowded Tammany Hall last night, to ratify the nominations for County Officers. The meeting, which was very enthusiastic, was addressed by Messrs. SICKLES, RENWALL, T. F. MEAGHER, Col. WRIGHT, BURTON and Hon. JOHN KELLY. Resolutions were passed, indorsing the ticket, the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN, and the course of ROBERT J. WALKER in Kansas.

Our German fellow-citizens held a ratification meeting of the Republican State ticket last night, at the Volks-Garten in the Bowery. There was a very large attendance, the vast building being filled. Addresses were delivered in German and English,—in the former language by Messrs. KAPP, FRANK, TECHNIKER and others, and in English by Mr. C. L. BEACH. The proceedings were of the most enthusiastic nature.

The Americans in Kings County held a ratification meeting in Gothic Hall, Brooklyn, last evening. Addresses were made by Hon. E. C. WEED and several other gentlemen.

JAS. H. WELSH was nominated for Register last evening by the Americans. Mr. WELSH is also the Republican nominee, and is, therefore, the fusion candidate.

The Police Commissioners met yesterday at their new and spacious offices on Broome and Elm-streets. Mayor WOOD and General NYE indulged in some rather tart interchange of sentiment in reference to the mode in which the arrangements for procuring the new office had been made. The Mayor complained that he thought one of the Committee appointed for the purpose of selecting a more convenient office had never been consulted on the matter. The General retorted that it was not the business of the other members of the Committee to run after the Mayor for the purpose of consulting with him. If he wished for consultation it was his duty to come to them. The Mayor expressed himself as satisfied with the change, but still objected to the course pursued by the majority of the Committee. Policemen were appointed, and patrolmen detailed for the election in Brooklyn, conformably to the report of Mr. STRANAHAN. It was announced that no communication had, as yet, been received from Mr. DRAPER; and, in reference to newspaper statements and speculations as to the probable character of that gentleman's reply to the Board, Mr. CROLWELL sagely remarked that "newspapers, like a great many other people, said a great many things that were not true." The Board adjourned till 11 o'clock to-day.

The Board of Aldermen, last evening, received reports in favor of increasing the salaries of the City Inspector and Street Commissioner to $4,000 per annum each. Alderman MEAGHAN offered a resolution in favor of paying STERRITT H. BRANCH $2,000 for services performed for the Matsell Investigation Committee. The Board adopted a resolution requesting the Central Park Commissioners to prosecute the Central Park improvements with activity until the $250,000 appropriation is exhausted.

At the Board of Councilmen last evening, a Joint Committee was appointed to consider the appropriation of a portion of the Park for a Post-Office. The special order then came up, and the report of the Committee was read on the condition of the Comptroller's Department. On its conclusion, Councilman FRANKLIN read a speech on the subject, in which he stated that the Comptroller was under the influence of the Auditor, who took from the persons appointed by law a large share of the auditing of accounts and audits them himself. He stated that the books were full of errors, and that half the truth had not been told in the report. He wished that the Committee might be clothed with greater powers, and in this case he could promise very astounding disclosures. Councilman JONES spoke strongly in deprecation of the condition of the department, and charged all the existing evils on the Republican party. Councilmen OVERAKER and BRADY replied, the latter taunting the Democrats with their present abuse of Mr. BRADY after rejecting the nominee of the minority. Ultimately an appropriation was made to carry forward an investigation.

We understand that Mr. SETH GROSVENOR, a merchant of this City, has bequeathed the Board of Education the sum of $30,000, to be invested forever, and the interest applied by the Board, under certain conditions, for a Library for the Free Academy. Mr. GROSVENOR was a member of the Board of Public Schools of this City, and discharged the duties of his office with ability and success.

The vacancy in the United States Commissionership, left by the death of CHARLES MAXWELL, of the firm of Maxwell & Sons, is charged with activity to the extent of a dozen candidates, who appeared yesterday. A dozen is numerous, but there is the capital of the country and the patronage of Mr. Whitewell, arrangers for dealing out bad provisions to the passengers, had been dismissed. It appeared in evidence that the provisions had been passed upon by the commission in Liverpool, and pronounced good; and the doctor of the ship and the mate testified that they were such as are usually supplied to emigrants. It was held that if the provisions were good when put on board, the captain was not amenable for their bad condition afterward.

At the Fourth Anniversary meeting of the Southern Aid Society, at Dr. Adams' Church, Madison-square, last night, Rev. Drs. MITCHELL, of Virginia, and TOOF of Massachusetts, each delivered an address. From the Treasurer's report, it appears that the receipts during the past year have been $7,465 14—$8,858 42 less than in the year preceding. The expenditure for the same period has been $10,031 09. The report of the Executive Committee spoke of the past influence of the Society with congratulations, and of its future usefulness hopefully.

Dr. J. J. HAYS read a paper last evening before the Geographical and Statistical Society, upon the open Polar Sea of Dr. KANE. He announced himself ready to lead an expedition to demonstrate its existence, and suggested a plan for its prosecution, founded upon his personal knowledge of Arctic exploration and experience while with Dr. KANE. There was a full and deeply interested meeting.

In the Supreme Court yesterday, the orders in the Street Commissioner's case were settled. The injunction was continued against the Mayor, &c., restraining him from interfering with the books and papers of the office. The second order commands the delivery of the books, &c., of the office to Mr. CODWISE. We understand that the books have been delivered pursuant to the order. The motion to change the place of trial of CARGEMI was denied, and the case sent back to the Circuit. The matter of the execution of a new recognizance by Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, was postponed until to-day.

In the case of CUEVA, on trial for the murder of OSCAR DE GRAMMAL in Hoboken, the defence was opened yesterday. A number of witnesses were called, but no new material facts were elicited. The trial is still in progress.

The General Produce Markets, yesterday, exhibited renewed activity and buoyancy, for Breadstuffs. Flour advanced 5c.@10c. ⅌ bbl., with a lively home demand, and some export inquiry. Wheat was also dearer, and prices of Corn favored factors. The sales were, to a fair extent, restricted somewhat by the scarcity of really desirable lots, especially of Corn. Provisions were dull and heavy. No improvement occurred in Groceries. Cotton was inactive and nominal, owing to the scanty offerings. Freights varied little.

The Ballot-Box and the Bayonet.

The Telegraph, yesterday afternoon, brought us the extraordinary but not altogether inexplicable intelligence that the Governor of Maryland had put the capital city of that State under martial law, and had ordered a force of seven thousand men to hold themselves in readiness to "preserve the peace on Wednesday next, the day of the general election." It is understood that the Executive of Maryland took this step at the earnest request of many respectable citizens of Baltimore, fully convinced that nothing less than the armed interposition of the Government could avert the imminent danger of a series of outrageous conflicts at the polls of the city and the possible consequent disorganization, for a time, of all social order in the chief city of the Southern States.

For some time past the journals of Baltimore have teemed with accounts of violent assaults, committed with impunity, upon quiet citizens in the broad light of day, with stories of fierce affrays fought out to the end by rival bodies of disciplined ruffians, without let or hindrance from the Municipal Police; with murders and with rumors of murder. And the country has not yet forgotten the outrage upon the rights of suffrage at the Capital of the nation, which was planned and attempted by a band of "sympathizers" from Baltimore, and only prevented by the energy of the Federal authorities in the direct employment of the muskets of the Marine Corps. To say, then, that the action of the Governor of Maryland at this juncture has taken the public entirely by surprise, would not be strictly correct. And we hardly know in what words to express the bitterness and poignancy of the feelings which must stir the heart of every true patriot and of every sincere Republican, under the consciousness that we have reached a point at which the proclamation by a great officer of State, of the impotence of the public conscience to the preservation of the public order in the fourth city of the Union, must be accepted as a political and social necessity.

Whatever the issue of the measure may be—whether peace shall be maintained in the streets of Baltimore by the mere array of military force, or compelled at the price of battle and of bloodshed—the fearful fact cannot be altered or drained of its tremendous significance, that, whether justly or unjustly, the respectable citizens of Baltimore and the administration of the State to which they belong, have been alarmed into a confession before the world of the inadequacy of the popular will to restrain the excesses of criminal and reckless men in their community. If this step has been taken rashly or on insufficient grounds, the heavy responsibility rests upon the heads of those who advised it, of bringing our free institutions to public shame throughout the world. If, on the other hand, it has been taken gravely, calmly and of necessity, then we may well throw aside all concern about the effect which it is likely to produce upon our national reputation, for the far more pressing and solemn consideration of the light which it throws upon certain phases of our national character and certain tendencies of our national future. For Baltimore is not alone among her sister cities afflicted with these elements of individual lawlessness and municipal imbecility, out of which this crisis in her affairs has been developed.

The thing which has been in one place may well be in another, if the same causes are allowed to operate with an equal license in both. And if Baltimore draws the bayonet to-day to protect the ballot-box, she but confesses in an appeal of arms the same shameful truth which New-Orleans, at no distant yesterday, revealed in the triumphs of Judge Lynch, and which New-York will assuredly be summoned to face at some near to-morrow.

Not a year has elapsed since the Attorney-General of Louisiana, in a report on the "State of Crime in New-Orleans," after presenting a frightful picture of the practical carnival of murder which had been kept up in that city for months, frankly owned that nothing but a "Committee of Vigilance" could be relied upon to protect the lives and the property of the people. These are his words:

"It is the universal sentiment of our country that when Government is a mere oppression, revolution becomes a right. So, also, it is said, as we relinquish the right of self-preservation for a consideration provided by the law, that the law will protect us, and the law fails to protect us, then the same reason that justifies revolution manifests what is equivalent to revolution—assuming justice on the contingency when the law is unable to reach, or who, precisely, represents the law."

This passage is quoted at length by Mr. STRANGE in his recent work on this country, and he adds, as a liberal and friendly observer of American institutions: "Can all this be real? Is this really a city of the Model Republic a fair example of the 'first great experiment of self-government?' May not the Republicanism of Louisiana be described as a despotism of the mob tempered by lynch-law halters?"

What answer are we now to return to such questions? For it is not the "Republicanism of Louisiana" alone that is put by them upon its trial. The Republicanism of Maryland and of New-York as well, the Republicanism of the nation is involved in the issue. It will not do to say that the great cities of the Republic are gangrened by infusions of a foreign virus, or that the Democratic virtue which can save the State warms and glows in the uncontaminated veins of the country, on the prairies of the West and on the farms of the East. The influence of the great centres of population must sooner or later mould the character, as it always tends to control the policy, of the nation. And who are the Americans of the great cities? Are they not bone of the bone and flesh of the flesh of their rustic fellow-citizens? The country is forever feeding the cities with new lives. And if there be not some speedy demonstration made by whatever of capacity and of character is to be found in our capitals—if the honor, the honesty and the Republican intelligence of our great City populations do not speedily put themselves forth to arrest the demoralization and disintegration of all municipal life in this nation, we may rely upon it that it will not be in Baltimore or in Louisville, in New-York or in New-Orleans alone, that the ballot-box, which we cherish as the Palladium of our liberties, must begin to fade into a mockery under the fatal protection of the bayonet.

Curtailing the Cost of Living.

It is not in this country alone that the necessity of curtailing the cost of living has forced itself upon the attention of the political economist and the conservators of the public morals; neither is it in this country alone that the greater share of the blame for the extravagancies of the times has been ruthlessly thrown upon the shoulders of the weaker sex. A popular Catholic print has been preaching for more than a year past in Paris against the excess of feminine costume, and the last number of the Westminster Review opens with an article on ladies' dress—the costly little bonnet and the exuberant gown, with its infinitude of flounces, being the two articles upon which this grave radical quarterly comes down with all the force of its rhetoric and sarcasm; and we shall be rather surprised if the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his next budget does not have something to say upon the subject. Even if he should not, our Secretary of the Treasury in his next report will probably take it up, as Ex-Attorney-General CUSHING has not thought it beneath his dignity to grapple with the matter in one of his recent public addresses, though he gallantly came to the rescue of the ladies and denied that their skirts were any wider, or their dresses any more costly than they ought to be. The ladies and dry goods dealers ought to present him with a testimonial for his timely championship. Judiciously following the lead of the TIMES, he has been the Havelock of the hard times for the beleagured fair sex, and appeared just in time to save their wardrobes from destruction.

As to curtailing the cost of living, it is much easier to tell where to begin than where to leave off, when the process of curtailment once commences. Few persons know how cheaply they can live until they try; and there are few persons, too, who ever seriously reflect on what the consequences would be of a general curtailment in the cost of living. A man of talent in Massachusetts, named THOREAU, a few years since made a practical experiment in the art of living cheaply and published the result of his experiment for the benefit of mankind. He retired to the woods and built himself a house in which he resided a year, living on the produce of his own labor, and luxuriating in the study of philosophy reading the Greek poets and investigating the mysteries of the theology of Vishnu. According to his own account he lived very happily, enjoyed a high state of bodily health, at a cost, as nearly as we can remember, of some twenty cents a week. Living by himself, must, of course, have considerably added to the cost of his living; and it may be assumed that a community of such economists might live at a much cheaper rate. But every one will see at a glance that such economy as was practiced by the Massachusetts philosopher, though it would effectually rescue the country from the inconveniences of a financial panic, would reduce the people to a condition very little above that of barbarism.

Extravagance is, of course, an evil, but the great difficulty is to give an exact definition of that much-ventilated word. Between the indolent philosophers, who are willing to cultivate Greek poetry on an expenditure of twenty cents a week, and the dashing dinner-giving occupant of a Fifth-avenue mansion, who, on an income of five thousand dollars a year, squanders fifty thousand belonging to somebody else, there are a good many shades of difference. The man who earns only what he eats, is of very little benefit to society; but the man who spends more than he earns, is a positive evil. These are the two extremes of the economic scale, and all between, who form the great mass of the community, are they who form the strength of the body politic. Their earnings and their expenditure make up the great business of the nation, and as the one must regulate and determine the other, there is no danger that any great disturbance can grow out of their excesses. An individual may ruin himself and bring his family to grief by his personal extravagancies, but a whole people cannot.

The consequences of personal imprudence are most forcibly summed up in a very few words by that distinguished political economist, Mr. Micawber:

"Annual income—twenty pounds. Annual expenditure—nineteen, eleven, six; result—happiness. Annual income—twenty pounds. Annual expenditure—twenty pounds, ought and six; result—misery. The blossom is blighted; the leaf is withered; the god of day goes down upon the dreary scene, and, in short, you are forever floored."

This is the whole sum and substance of what is meant by extravagance and luxury. To spend sixpence more than your income, let it be what it may, is extravagance, ruin and wretchedness; and it is just there that curtailment in the cost of living should commence. It does not matter much how many flounces your wife wears to her dress, nor how much her skirts expand, so long as they come within the limits of your income; but the moment you discover they are going beyond them, begin to curtail without reserve.

POST-OFFICE SITE.—We understand that the President of the United States not long since applied to Mayor WOOD offering to enter upon negotiations with our City Government for the purchase of a portion of the Park as the site for a new City Post-Office, and that the Mayor replied that no such proposition could be entertained, inasmuch as the City Government had no authority to alienate any portion of the Park for that or any other purpose. Our Washington correspondent two or three days since gave the details of the communications upon this subject.

The Mayor certainly must have given this answer hastily. Some weeks ago the Common Council, we believe, did adopt resolutions expressing the same opinion—but at the last session of the Legislature a law was passed which in so many words confers upon them all the authority needed in the premises. It is chapter 770, Laws of 1857, and authorizes the erection of a new City Hall,—making it the duty of the Commissioners first to offer to construct the building in such a manner as to afford accommodations for the Post-Office and United States Courts, if the General Government shall desire it,—and if not, then empowering the Mayor and Common Council of the City to

"Make conveyance by deed of grant or lease of any portion of the Park, to the Government of the United States, for the erection thereon, at the expense of the said Government, of such building for the purposes of a Post-Office, or accommodation for the Courts of the United States, held in said City, and for the offices attached to said Courts, upon being duly compensated for the same."

Nothing certainly can be more explicit than this; the precise authority needed is conferred in terms upon the City Government.

We observe that the Common Council is now inclined to take the same view of the case and act upon it; for last evening the Board of Councilmen adopted resolutions authorizing the opening of negotiations with the Government upon the subject. The lower angle of the Park is undoubtedly better suited to the purposes of a Post-Office than any other part of it,—but there may be objections to its appropriation which would not exist in regard to the upper portion, upon which several public buildings have already been erected. The universal conviction of the public is that the Post-Office should be placed somewhere in the immediate vicinity of the Park,—and we trust the Aldermen will at once concur in the action of the other Board upon this subject.

COSTLINESS OF PUBLIC BENEVOLENCE.—We do not apprehend there is much danger of Mayor WOOD's stupendous scheme for relieving the wants of the poor, by having the City government enter into the retail provision trade, and thus ruining the thousands who now derive their subsistence from it, being adopted. But a few of his supporters apparently find something in it which commands their approval. It is probably the fact, that it would create a new army of office-holders, which renders it so acceptable to this particular portion of the Mayor's political friends. Upon this point a leaf from the experience of the past may not be uninstructive.

In 1847, when the British Government found itself under the dire necessity of dispensing food to the starving population of Ireland, the number of persons who were employed to distribute alms and apportion work to the poor consisted of 74 chief inspectors, 400 engineers, 3,000 check clerks, and 7,000 overseers. These were only the principals, but, under them were a much greater number of subordinates. Knowing how all the public business of this City is conducted, how three men are usually employed to do what one person could accomplish in ordinary cases, we may easily foresee what would be the consequences of Mayor WOOD's project being adopted, and what an army of office-holders would be quartered, at an enormous expense, upon the City.

Whatever scheme may be adopted for the relief of the poor next Winter, we trust it will not be one for the distribution of provisions, except as it has been usually done by the Almshouse Department. There may and will be cases in which direct supplies of food will be needed to prevent starvation;—and to all such cases prompt and proper attention should be given. But nothing can be at once more wasteful and more demoralizing, than any general system which leads the mass of the poor to look directly to the government for their daily bread. It should be the last resort, even in times of general and intense distress.

KANSAS MATTERS.—We have received further news of considerable interest from Kansas this morning. The proclamation of Gov. WALKER and Secretary STANTON, rejecting the fraudulent votes of Oxford Precinct in Johnson County, seems to have roused the ultraists of the Border-Ruffian school to desperation. Judge CATO, whose attempt to compel the limitation of the suffrage to those who had paid taxes was foiled by the firmness of Gov. WALKER, has issued an order commanding him to give certificates of election to the men elected by the fraudulent vote: but the Governor treated his message with just contempt.

The correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says that the fraudulent votes from McGee County will also be rejected, and that the Free-State members will receive the certificates of election. Judge LECOMPTE has written a letter of reply to the New-Haven Memorial to President BUCHANAN. The Judge attempts to be very severe, but succeeds only in being very abusive: his letter is not worth reprinting.

The Washington letter which we copy from the Richmond Enquirer, upon the subject of Kansas, will attract and reward attention. It repeats with still greater emphasis the views of the Enquirer which we copied yesterday, and rebukes with just and significant severity the schemes of the ultraists at the South who insist upon forcing Slavery upon Kansas by Congressional action against the will of its inhabitants.

EQUALIZING THE CURRENCY.—A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce makes the following suggestion concerning a mode of supplying the leading defect of our Banking system:

"Let Congress pass a law authorizing the Sub-Treasury at its various offices to receive gold on deposit, and issue certificates therefor, in sums of $20, $50 and $100, payable to bearer, or order, as may be desired. This will furnish a currency at par from Maine to California, and serve to equalize exchanges also."

The suggestion seems well worthy of consideration. It is certainly a very serious defect in our present system that it has no uniformity,—that we have no paper money, nothing in a form suitable for remittance, which has the same value in every part of the country. The necessity for such a currency constituted the whole stock in trade of the advocates of a National Bank, after it became evident from sad experience that such an institution was not the safest custodian of the public funds. The Sub-Treasury has proved an admirable substitute for it in this respect. If it could now fulfill the sole remaining function of a National Bank, by furnishing a currency based absolutely upon gold and silver, and of equal value in every part of the country, it would leave nothing to be desired in this direction. The issues of State Banks would continue to afford a currency for the ordinary purposes of the business community,—the Sub-Treasury certificates being used mainly for transmitting funds to distant points.

SIR WILLIAM GORE OUSELEY.—We are informed, on reliable authority at Washington, that our London correspondent was in error in intimating that Sir WILLIAM GORE OUSELEY would be sent to this country as Special Minister. It is to Central America that that gentleman is to be accredited, according to our informant.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Reasons for Continuing the Troops in Kansas—The Administration and General American Affairs—The New-York Post-Office—The Postmaster-General and the Foreign Mails, &c.

From our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, Oct. 29, 1857.

I understand that Governor WALKER's request to have the United States troops continued in Kansas during the coming Winter, was prefaced chiefly in consequence of information that the Pro-Slavery men, exasperated by the result of the late elections, are preparing to resort to desperate measures of fraud and violence for the recovery of their lost vantage ground. This they probably hope to be able to accomplish when the Constitution about to be framed is submitted to the people of the Territory for their judgment thereupon.

It will be seen that any such attempt will bring about the most dangerous crisis in the whole history of Kansas affairs, and one requiring a prompt, vigorous, and decisive policy on the part of the Executive, to smother the spark of rebellion which otherwise may suddenly involve the country in civil war. These are the considerations said to have governed the President in agreeing to Gov. WALKER's request.

The Administration labors under serious disadvantage in dealing with Central American affairs at present, for want of reliable and disinterested intelligence from that quarter. We have no Minister in Nicaragua, Costa Rica or Guatemala, and no Government Agent there except Wm. CAREY JONES, who has proved of no service whatever, and from whom there is little probability of getting any intelligible report of affairs.

Mr. BUCHANAN can hardly feel justified in taking any important step with reference to affairs in that country, while thus completely blindfolded. There never was a time when a sober, trustworthy, discreet and intelligent diplomatic agent was so much needed in Nicaragua and Costa Rica especially, as now; and it is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that the President, who fully understands the importance of this subject, will fill up the unfortunate gap without unnecessary delay.

Some of General WALKER's wisest friends say that he is only waiting for the proper season in which to return to Nicaragua. In his former expedition his men could not be restrained from eating to excess of the fruits of the country, which, with the villainous liquors obtained there, ran up most disastrous bills of mortality. His present plan is to go into the country during the healthiest season, and that in which the safety of his men will not be so much endangered through the imprudent gratification of their appetites. He expects his next campaign to be a short and decisive one, and deems it best in preparing therefor to "make haste slowly."

The recent announcement that the British Government had transmitted a favorable reply to General CASS' dispatch relative to the Bay Islands affair was erroneous. So also was the statement that England had concluded a Treaty with Honduras relinquishing said Islands to the latter. The Convention recently concluded between these powers was an ordinary Commercial Treaty, and an arrangement for the protection of the railroad proposed to be constructed across the Republic of Honduras.

The Government of the latter now decline absolutely to conclude a treaty with England accepting the conditions imposed by the latter on the relinquishment of the Bay Islands. These conditions consist of, first, a concession of territory to British subjects who have settled upon the islands; and, second, a stipulation that Slavery shall never be established therein. Honduras very properly contends that England is upon the islands now as an intruder, by forcible fraud—that it is her duty to clear out unconditionally, and that her attempt to dictate the conditions on which she will abandon her usurpations is simply impudent. Of course this leaves the dispute upon the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty entirely open, without the least prospect of a settlement.

There is no probability that the New-York Post-Office building will be commenced this year. Even if the Postmaster-General had made choice of a site therefor, now that he is forced to look for it in private hands, it would be difficult to get the old buildings covering it removed in time to excavate before Winter sets in. Besides, the depleted condition of the Treasury indisposes the Administration to commence any new building. If the proposition of Gov. BROWN for a site in the Park had been accepted, it is quite probable that the pecuniary objections would have been waived in this case. Besides, a site in the Park being free from present buildings, work would be advantageously commenced upon it at once.

The efforts of Common Council jobbers, which have heretofore defeated the transfer of a lot in the Park for Post-Office purposes, are likely to result in more serious evil than New-Yorkers seem to realize. The President is positive in his determination to purchase the site and put up the building for the $400,000 already appropriated, or not to put it up at all; and Congress, finding this money still unexpended, will not unlikely determine to use it for other purposes, thus postponing the erection of a new Post-Office building in your City indefinitely.

But even if the building is eventually put up, it must necessarily go to some inconvenient locality, because it will be impossible to obtain a site, in the right neighborhood, for anything like the sum which the President and Postmaster-General deem themselves authorized to pay. Governor BROWN's first proposition to the City was that it should give the Federal Government a site on the Chambers-street front of the Park, on which he proposed then to expend the entire appropriation in putting up a magnificent building for the Post-Office and United States Courts. This was rejected. He then offered $250,000 for 200 feet front in the location named, and that was declined upon the pretext that the City had no power to sell. It seems curious that the Mayor of New-York, in the face of the legislative authority to the City to sell a lot to Government, cited in yesterday's Times, could have written the above letter, and Fingerman Wood did not send to Governor Brown.

Here [illegible] of New-York [illegible] the trading politicians who are seeking personal gain at serious expense to the City's interest. The simple question is, whether on the one side, you shall risk a loss, altogether, of the half million appropriation, or have the Post-Office located somewhere in Centre-street, or in Canal-street, or at the Five Points or in "the Swamp," or, whether on the other side, you will take $250,000 cash for a lot in the Park on which to have erected a splendid building, to be commenced forthwith. If the latter alternative be adopted, not only will a considerable amount of employment be afforded to laboring men this Winter, but the price paid to the City for the lot may be made to great advantage in giving employment and bread to hundreds of others, in carrying out various other City improvements.

A very natural inquiry, however, is as to the conduct of the Postmaster-General over the foreign mails, which results in unjust reflections upon the Department in consequence of his failure to forward the foreign mails by the Vanderbilt. As I understand, the Post-Office Department had no power to do this. In the common sense view, it would seem to be a case of the circumstances. The Postmaster-General is an executive officer merely, and his duty is to carry out the laws of Congress. Beyond this he could not take a step. Congress, by law, authorized the Navy Department to contract with the Cunard line to carry the mails, and appropriated money for the purpose for that service. Mr. BROWN can issue a contract, the law, the failure of the contract, he has no power to use the line to pay Mr. VANDERBILT or anybody else. Mr. VANDERBILT proposes to carry the mails, provided the Department will agree to pay him Mr. CUNARD's compensation. Mr. BROWN had no power to make any such arrangement, and Mr. VANDERBILT knew it. If he had assented to the proposition, he would no more have bound the Government to it than could your correspondent, although he would have made himself personally responsible to Mr. VANDERBILT.

It may be answered that he should have assumed this responsibility, trusting to Congress to extricate him of its consequences; but that is a refinement of a woman of ordinary prudence and experience in Congressional life will be willing to transact. Besides, Congress has frequently, in quite similar cases, left a public officer in the lurch, because it was deemed important to check the tendency to such indiscretion on their part. I have not consulted with those connected with the Post-Office Department in relation to this matter, but am quite sure that my statement of the law is accurate. The error is with Congress, which, by specific, though inadvertent, restriction, has tied the Postmaster-General's hands. Mr. VANDERBILT would have manifested commendable public spirit had he taken the mails without expense, on a condition which he knew was an impossible one, he could have afforded to take the risk of receiving a pecuniary reward from Congress—in addition to the thanks of the commercial community, which he failed to serve in this hour of their calamity—much better than could Gov. BROWN.

"The Police Commissioners."

MAYOR WOOD COMPLAINS OF HIS HAVING BEEN OMITTED TO BE REFERRED TO THE CELEBRATION OF A NEW DEPARTURE—HE INVITES FROM MR. PRAYER.

The Board of Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police met yesterday, at their new quarters, on the corner of Broome and Elm streets. This is a capacious and elegant structure, formerly known as the Monitor Hotel, and is admirably adapted for the present purposes. All the members were in attendance, General NYE, as presiding officer, being in the Chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read. They contained, as additional matter, a summary of the adjournments which have occurred for the last three or four days, and exhibited a resolution providing that the next (that is, the present meeting) be held in the new office, corner of Broome and Elm.

Mayor POWELL inquired of the Clerk if such a resolution had been passed.

The Clerk replied that there had been no formal adoption of it, but as there seemed to be a general understanding among the members of the Board as to the next place of meeting, he had recorded the fact in the minutes.

Mayor POWELL had the impression that the matter of renting new offices had been referred to a Committee, and he was not aware that that Committee had ever reported on the subject.

Mr. BOWNE said the only thing that he knew of having been recently referred to a Committee was the new handcuffs.

Mayor WOOD did not know that this place had been hired for the Board until he came here to-day.

General NYE replied that it had been a subject of conversation in the Board, in which he (Mayor WOOD) had shared. Mr. CROLWELL had suggested that the place was a little too much out of the way, and he (the Mayor) said that unless a building could be procured in the vicinity of the Park, this place might be as convenient as any. With that suggestion, he (General NYE) supposed the thing to be entirely understood. Mr. CROLWELL had been as much consulted about the renting of this place as anybody, and it was taken for granted that on all sides there was a thorough concurrence as to the propriety of procuring this building for the use of the Board.

Mayor WOOD said there had been a general conversation as to three or four places, but certainly he never supposed that one or two members of a committee were authorized to hire a place into his by the name of the Police Commissioners, without first ascertaining the mind of the Board on that subject.

Gen. NYE asserted that it had been referred to a Committee with power, and, if there was any question about what had been done, let it be submitted to the Board for their confirmation or rejection.

Mayor WOOD was a member of that Committee, and he had never been consulted about the matter.

Gen. NYE thought it was as much the Mayor's duty to consult with the rest of the Committee, as it was theirs to consult with him. His Honor, however, might be perfectly easy as to the responsibility. If the Board were not disposed to take this place, the Committee would see that the rent be paid, and have the agreement cancelled.

Mayor WOOD did not object to the change, but to the mode in which the transaction had been managed.

Gen. NYE had to object to one thing. He wished it to be known that it should not be the duty of Commissioners to run after the Mayor of New-York when that gentleman happened to be appointed on a Committee with them. Here, he said, was the place where the business was to be done—here, in the office of the Board. This matter had been talked of openly in the Board. It had been said that the rent of the house on the corner of Church-street was too high—that $8,000 a year was too much. On the other hand, this place on the corner of Broome and Elm, which needed very little repair, could be rented for $4,000. And the Mayor of New-York stated in the open Board that that rent was a reasonable rent, and that, if a building could not be obtained in the vicinity of the Park, this would answer the purpose.

Mr. BOWNE, though also a member of that Committee, had never been consulted on the subject.

Mayor POWELL had the impression that this matter had been referred to another Committee.

Mr. BOWNE—No; in the month of July or August, before the long adjournment, it was referred to the President, Treasurer and Mayor of New-York, with power.

Mayor WOOD thought Mr. BOWNE was correct in that. As he (the Mayor) had said already, his objection was not to the change, for he thought it was a favorable change; but he did object to one or two members of the Board assuming the power to do an act of that kind without consulting with, at least, the other members of the Committee appointed for the purpose.

After a pause of several seconds, Mr. STRANAHAN inquired if the Board was now ready to take up the current business.

Gen. NYE preferred to have this thing settled now.

Mayor WOOD was understood to say that he did not think there could be any difference of opinion as to the manifest advantage of the change, and was quite satisfied that no further settlement was needed.

And thus the controversy ended.

Mr. STRANAHAN, from the Committee appointed to nominate poll-clerks for the several elections [illegible] in Brooklyn, presented a list of 32.

Mayor POWELL moved the adoption of the report and confirmation of the listed nominees. Carried.

Mr. BOWNE presented the evidence taken on the trial, before him, of Peter Cahill, for using improper language in the Station-house, and, upon hearing that as the evidence was insufficient to sustain the charge, the case be dismissed. It was so ordered.

He also reported the evidence in the case of John McKeon, of the Third Ward, charged with [illegible]

[illegible]

Mayor Wood inquired into the nature of the case.

[illegible] Mr. Powers said he was for one, [illegible] company with a woman.

[illegible] Mayor Wood took the [illegible] reported on the petition of Isaac [illegible] to the Police force on the ground that he had been improperly dismissed by the [illegible] that the papers be [illegible] whether his dismissal had been proper or [illegible] he had a remedy in a Court of Law. Carried.

[illegible] submitted a resolution declaring that [illegible] of the late Officers Jarboe and Sparks, the sister of the late Officer Anderson, were entitled to relief from the Life Insurance Fund, and recommending that each be paid quarterly the [illegible] at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

General Fry stated that in relation to the claims of the widows of Jarboe and Sparks he had given the matter due consideration, and thought it would be [illegible] to make appropriations in their behalf [illegible] they provided for their families. He [illegible] however, to make further inquiries as to the case of Anderson, and desired that that portion of the [illegible] relating to his case might be left over.

The resolution was laid on the table.

[illegible] was a communication from Officer Wm. Maynard to [illegible] that Officer Wm. Maynard be allowed [illegible] for his own use a reward of $50, which was paid to him for his (Maynard's) services.

The Board said the same course must be followed in this as had been pursued in similar cases, viz., that the reward be paid into the Life Insurance Fund.

Mr. Powers reported that since the last meeting he had received from an officer for the same purpose another reward of $10.

Mr. Powers submitted the following communication from the Superintendent:

POLICE, New-York, Oct. 29, 1857.

To the President of the Board of Commissioners:

SIR: I beg to inform the Board the names of two patrolmen for each poll district in the cities of New-York and Brooklyn, as required by a resolution of this Board, have been selected by the respective Captains of Districts in the City of New-York, and by the Deputy Superintendent of Brooklyn. Respectfully, F. A. TALLMADGE, Superintendent of Police.

This was accompanied by the annexed letter from the Deputy Superintendent:

OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT OF THE POLICE, New-York, Oct. 28, 1857.

F. A. Tallmadge, Chief Superintendent:

SIR: Thereby transmit types, as per General Order No. [illegible] the reports of the Captains and acting Captains of Police, in which the officers selected by them (as being best calculated) to attend the several polls in their respective districts. In several Precincts there will be no duty, as any men left as a reserve in case of emergency, and I have been asked by several of the Captains what provision will be made in such cases, to all of which I have answered that orders will be issued at a suitable time, providing for everything. Also, that on Saturday next the Captains will be convened at your office, and all the necessary arrangements made to carry out the letter and spirit of the law, and the preservation of the peace of the City on that day. Respectfully submitted,

DANIEL CARPENTER, Deputy Superintendent.

Accompanying these were the reports of the Captains of the various Districts, proposing the names of the officers whom they deemed best adapted for patrolmen at the several polling-places on election day.

Mayor Wood expressed a desire to have an opportunity of examining the names thus reported. The papers were handed to him.

Mr. Shanahan, from the Committee to whom the case of E. Johnson, of the First District of Brooklyn, had been referred back for the purpose of hearing evidence, moved that Johnson be dismissed. Adopted.

Mayor Wood submitted charges against Officers John Mead and —— Palmer, which were referred to the appropriate Committee.

Inquiry was made as to the time when the Committee on the Nomination of Poll Clerks for New-York City would be prepared to report.

Mr. Powers answered that they would be ready to report on Friday.

Mayor Powers moved that the officers designated by the Deputy Superintendent of Brooklyn to perform patrol duty at the polls in Brooklyn, be accepted and detailed for the purpose. Carried.

A motion to adjourn till to-morrow (Friday) at half-past one o'clock, was carried, nem. con.

Mayor Powers asked if anything had been heard from Mr. Draper.

Mr. Cockroft said he had called on Mr. Draper to-day (Thursday) and understood from him that there would be a communication from him at his (Mr. C.'s) store, at a quarter past one o'clock, but as yet none had been received.

General Nye said he had no communication whatever on the subject. He also had seen Mr. Draper and talked with him, but Mr. Draper did not say to him that he was going either to accept or decline. He (General Nye) saw that some of the papers were asserting that Mr. Draper would decline.

Mr. Cockroft.—But papers, like many other people, say many things that are not true.

General Nye.—Then it is a question between you and the papers.

The Board adjourned.

THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY LIBRARY REMOVAL.—The Historical Society takes possession of its new building, on Second-avenue, next Thursday evening, with grand ceremonies and speech-making. The building, which is of Portsmouth stone, the same that the new Tribune building is being constructed of, is fire-proof, and cost some $75,000. Not a dollar is due for it! The Library has been closed during October. The books and works of art are already moved over to the new house, and the opening on Tuesday is the first view of them, in their fitting quarters, that the members get. The public—that is to say, members' families—are admitted on Wednesday evening.

Police Intelligence.

TWO BURGLARS ARRESTED.—The hardware store No. 96 Duane-street, it will be recollected, was entered a few nights since by two burglars, one of whom stabbed Officer DEGETT while attempting to arrest him, and, together with the other, made good his escape. The officers of the Fifth Ward have since been on the look-out for the burglars, but could get no clue to them till yesterday, when an unlooked-for circumstance brought them to their knowledge. A negro named Bill Gardner, who was arrested on a charge of petit larceny, and in hopes to get off clear, confessed that himself and another negro named Samuel W. Stewart, alias Stovey, committed the burglary, and that his confederate stabbed the officer. He told where Stewart lived in Williamsburg, and the latter was arrested yesterday afternoon. Both are locked up in the Tombs to await examination.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF ROWDIES.—Frank W. Hoffman, a German, died yesterday morning at the New-York Hospital, from the effects of injuries received last Saturday night at the hands of two unknown men, who attacked him in Crosby-street. It will be remembered from the previous report of the case that Hoffman was partially intoxicated when he was set upon and robbed and badly beaten. The deceased was a single man, 40 years of age, and was employed in the liquor store of Henry Lesse & Co., No. 129 Greenwich-street.

E. C. HERRING & CO.'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The subscribers, grateful for past favors, and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to this extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their depôt, by opening an extensive ware and sales room on Broadway, at No. 261, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture, for the security of plate and jewelry, and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves. Also, will keep on hand and make to order, all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults. Halls patent powder-proof locks for banks or store doors. Jones' patent permutation bank locks, and Crygier's patent letter lock, without key.

Mr. LAWRENCE BONNELL, Milwaukie,

Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes.

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat, that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

THE NEW-YORK LEDGER.

The number for Nov. 7, which is out THIS (Thursday) MORNING, is an unusually excellent number. Besides its usual copious variety of choice matter, it has an exquisitely humorous Poem by JOHN G. SAXE, entitled "BILL BROWN'S VISIT TO GOTHAM," admirably illustrated by THWAITES.

THE LEDGER is sold by all News Dealers. Price only FOUR CENTS.

SAXE'S GREAT POEM,

ENTITLED

BILL BROWN'S VISIT TO GOTHAM,

In the NEW-YORK LEDGER for Nov. 7, now ready, is the wittiest, funniest, raciest and spicest production which SAXE, or anybody else, ever wrote. It bristles with pungent hits at Napoleon's Old Guard dit with bayonets. In the words of the poet:

"Bill Brown resides near a country village
And has filled his till by honest tillage."

And having plenty of cash and leisure he comes to New-York, where

"Two dashy young fellows, of elegant mien,
Amused him awhile with a pretty machine—
An ivory ball which he never had seen."

But the way "Bill" escaped being victimized by the "patent-safe" game, was entirely original and effectual. The same may be said of the pocket-book droppers, mock auctioneers, and other metropolitan swindlers. How they all attacked Bill Brown's well-filled pocket-book, and with what result, may be learned by reading the poem, which is admirably illustrated by THWAITES. The LEDGER also contains contributions from George D. Prentice, Fanny Fern, and other eminent writers; more of CORB'S great Revolutionary Tale, "THE PIONEER PATRIOT; OR, THE MAID OF THE WAR-PATH;" also, more of the thrilling story "Lady Claudine; or, The Double Marriage," and the usual variety of other choice matter. For sale by all news dealers. Price only four cents.

THE PANIC AND THE NEW-YORK LEDGER.—It is a matter of astonishment to everybody (and especially to publishers and news-dealers, who best understand the business) that the circulation of THE NEW-YORK LEDGER should go on steadily increasing during these hard times. But the fact is, THE LEDGER has become a necessity. Everybody says it and reads it. Let us give an instance: Our friend, Mr. Thwaites, stopped into the Bowery Savings Bank the day after the great rush on that institution, and there he saw ten policemen, sitting on benches, stationed to keep the bank from expected trouble, every one of whom, he says, was absorbed in the perusal of THE LEDGER. This fact will serve to illustrate the hold which THE LEDGER has on the minds and affections of the people, and to indicate why its circulation steadily increases notwithstanding the tremendous pressure of the hard times. THE LEDGER is the only weekly paper for which all the great writers of the country constantly contribute. From its enormous circulation it can afford to pay the best writers, and hence it monopolizes them. Only $2 per annum; two copies, $3. Address

ROBERT BONNER, No. 44 Ann-st., New-York.

THE NEW-YORK LEDGER FOR OCT. 24 is already received by HAWKS at the Post-Office. The hard times seem to have a beneficial effect upon THE LEDGER—the circulation still going up, up, up!

The above paragraph is clipped from the Buffalo Express, a paper that has for some time past been decidedly unfriendly to THE LEDGER. In such times as these, when we find our enemies voluntarily admitting the fact that the circulation of THE LEDGER is "still going up, up, up!" when other papers are going down, we think they pay the highest possible compliment to us.

330,000 CIRCULATION, AND STILL Increasing. Such is the unparalleled prosperity of the NEW-YORK LEDGER—the Queen of the Weeklies. Buy it and read SAXE'S great Poem, "Bill Brown's Visit to Gotham." It is splendidly illustrated by THWAITES.

IT CAN AFFORD IT, THAT IS THE REASON why the NEW-YORK LEDGER increases in circulation. It can afford to employ the best writers; and it can also afford to advertise, and let the public know all about it. Hence its great success—its wonderful, incredible success. Read Saxe's great Poem in the LEDGER. It costs only four cents.

THE MISSOURI PRESBYTERIAN, IN speaking of THE NEW-YORK LEDGER, says:

"This journal deserves great credit for its outspoken conduct in reference to vice."

It is the high tone and pure morality of THE LEDGER which make it such a universal favorite. Not a single coarse word is ever permitted to appear in its columns.

HARD TIMES AND THE LEDGER.—It is not merely in New-York that the circulation of THE LEDGER continues to increase; it is so all over the country. What is your city? Take a look for a favorite paper, even in hard times!—only the price of a single cigar, of which some people smoke half a dozen in a day. Besides, people must have something to read; and who is so poor as to feel the expenditure of FOUR CENTS A WEEK?

POLITICAL.

Mass Meeting of the German Republicans and of the Democrats.

Grand Democratic Ratification Meeting in Tammany Hall.

Speeches by Daniel E. Sickles, Josiah Randall, Thomas Francis Meagher, Col. Wright, Gen. John Kelly, and others.

THE TICKET AND GOV. WALKER INDORSED.

The Democracy of the City and County of New-York, met in Tammany Hall last evening, for the purpose of ratifying the Nominations for County Offices. For more than an hour before the time for organizing, a band discoursed music from the balcony; and the Marshals got off good service in the Park. At 7 o'clock, there was a very large concourse in front of the Hotel, and at 7½ o'clock, when the doors were opened, the people rushed in in a mass, and in a few minutes the Hall was crowded. The speakers were greeted with three cheers. After nominating a Chairman he requested that the Secretary read order that marked the proceedings of the previous meeting, and the Secretary read the President of the meeting.

The resolution was received with cheers. The President, on taking the Chair, congratulated the meeting upon the unanimity and harmony that prevailed in their ranks. When he had concluded, a list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries was read by Marshal Rynders, and adopted by the meeting. A series of resolutions was then read by Ex-Alderman Purdy, approving the administration of Mr. Buchanan, and the efficient course of Robert J. Walker as Governor of Kansas; denouncing Republicanism and all other isms, together with the laws passed by the last Legislature relating to the City and County of New-York. They recommended some change in the tax laws, and a continuance to completion of the public works in progress, so that as many of the laborers as possible might be employed during the coming Winter. The resolutions, which concluded with an indorsement of the candidates for county offices, were adopted unanimously.

Hon. Daniel E. Sickles was the first speaker announced. He said there had never been a time when the appearance of an old-fashioned gathering in Tammany Hall was more gratifying than the present, when the interests of the State were in the hands of an unprincipled Republican Party. He reviewed at some length the conduct of the Republican Legislature, and charged that while they were dicting the eyes of the people of New-York towards "bleeding Kansas," they were putting their insidious hands into their pockets. He charged that the Republican members were anxious to construct a railroad through the entire length of Broadway, and that they were deeply interested in that scheme. He also charged much of the present revulsion, which has thrown so many out of employment, upon the misrule of the party of the Republican Party. Similar results, he claimed, had always followed the ascendancy of a sectional sectional party, and therefore was it of the very greatest importance that the State and County should be rescued from the injurious influence of Republicanism and Know-Nothingism. Referring again to county interest, he charged that judicial decisions had been rendered upon party grounds, and while on that subject he referred to the Supreme Court, and said that during the last act of judicial disgrace had been perpetrated. A Judge of the Supreme Court, to satisfy party demands, had held Court in the office of the Street Commissioner. With such conduct he contrasted that of the Judges elected by the Democratic Party, and, in doing so, eulogized the candidates for judicial honors nominated by the Democracy. He spoke in terms of highest consideration of the other candidates upon the Democratic ticket, and was enthusiastically applauded.

Hon. Josiah Randall, of Philadelphia, was next announced, amid loud cries for "Meagher." Mr. Randall was received with cheers. He would not long detain them from listening to the talented gentleman who was to follow him. He wished simply to congratulate them upon the united front they now presented. As a stranger it was not his province to speak of the candidates, but he would speak particularly of the candidate. He would speak of the general ticket in less, and in doing so would refer particularly to the much abused term "Religious Liberty." It had now come to be considered by a certain party the height of religious freedom to allow a Catholic servant girl to tell her beads in the garret of her Protestant employer. (Great applause.) It was the same with other principles which were dear to us; they had come to be regarded by the narrowest and most contemptible party. But it was gratifying to know that such ideas could not thrive in this Republic. They were dying out. States in which they had flourished for a season had shown that they would succor them no more. All that was needed to crush them out entirely was united and earnest action on the part of the Democracy, and to that he urged them strongly.

The next speaker was Thomas Francis Meagher, who was received with nine hearty cheers. He commenced with a reference to the recent bad weather—to the chilling storms and leafless trees, which, he said, refused to be clad while the great cities were in dire distress. If had been needed, with truth that all along the East River our ships were lying moored in idleness; and that thousands of our workingmen had been forced to abandon their chisels and hammers and stand in idleness, while their families were in want of bread. It was also true that many of our merchants who had grown gray in the prosecution of their vocations, and who had secured (for themselves) luxurious abodes, now left their warehouses for their homes to find a sheriff at the door. And in such a time it was said by many, what is the use of interesting ourselves about politics when our very bread is doubtful? Such he denounced, for such would secure through temporary difficulty a permanent evil. Away with such counselors. There never was a time when public affairs did more urgently require public attention. He concluded with a humorous but pertinent allusion to the various candidates on the Democratic ticket, and made a powerful appeal to the audience to support Mayor Wood.

General Wallbridge was next called for, but he declined in favor of gentlemen from abroad.

Colonel Wright, of Boston, was next called upon. He spoke at some length upon the peculiarities of the opposing parties, and felt sure of the triumph of the Democracy.

He was followed by Richard Busteed, after the audience had insisted upon hearing Hon. John Kelly. Mr. Kelly asked them to hear Mr. Busteed, and he would speak afterwards. The audience at length consented, and when he (Busteed) had concluded, the calls for Mr. Kelly were renewed.

Mr. Kelly presented himself amid vehement and prolonged cheering. After all they had heard tonight, he declared it ran in his mind that, perhaps, they were satisfied with what had been already said. If he had constituted his own choice, he would have said nothing, but the importance of the occasion demanded, perhaps, that he should, as far as he could, recognize their friendly call. The issue in the ensuing election was not bleeding Kansas, but the redemption of New-York from the obloquy that had so long kept it in thrall. Of the result he had no doubt, and felt satisfied that on the 3d of November the sun would sink in the golden west over an overwhelming Democratic majority. The adoption and maintenance of a thorough economic policy during the last 20 years in this State, would, he stated, have eventuated in the extinguishment of the public debt and the completion of the canals, instead of, as now, having imposed on us the burden of a debt of $35,000,000, the payment of a 3-mill tax and the exaction of fearful City and county taxes. He declared his entire approval of the candidates of the Democratic Party, expressed his audience to give it an undivided and vigorous support, and, on resuming his seat, was loudly applauded.

The meeting subsequently adjourned, amid cries for Meagher, Rose, Hardwicke, &c., &c.

Letters were received during the day from several distinguished Democrats, but none of them were read. Copies, however, were furnished the reporters.

Hon. Reverdy Johnson thanked Heaven that the danger to the Union is past.

Hon. C. J. Ingersoll thinks wisdom inclines to seize this opportunity to master the banks. He says: "Gold is the Jonah in the whale belly of the banks; by a great act of national, constitutional interposal, when merely that divinity is intensely challenged, will afford the only effectual protection of our inestimable staples, enable us to export grain, flesh, fish, lumber, cotton, rice, sugars, lead, coal and all the other commodities of our marvelous country, current gold, which is thus to be kept for our own use, out of the dismal chaos in which our imports have been exulting their anything but masterly inactivity, with labor starving and capital struck senseless with fright, a world of industrious prosperity may be speedily realized. Our Augean stables can be readily cleansed of the filthy nuisances which more than any other mismanagement, gentlemen, render your splendid national emporium a much greater sore than Jefferson, and Hamilton, and Franklin, a den, if your journals tell true, of forgery, robbery, assassins, and other monsters."

Hon. Wm. B. Reeves says that "we (of Saugerties) have secured the Delft of Black Republicanism and Abolitionism and propose to lay fusion as cold as a wedge there in November. Ex-Speaker Ludlow has no more doubt that New-York will be Democratic than that Pennsylvania, Ohio, &c., are so already."

Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson hopes the Democratic party will be so large and strong that Fusion has to the City and County of New-York. Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, Esq., is confident of the success of his party, and hopes the election of Mr. Buchanan by an overwhelming majority.

German Republican Ratification Meeting.—The German Republicans of the City held a ratification meeting of the State ticket last evening at the Vereinigung Hall, Bowery. The audience numbered about two thousand. A very excellent band was in attendance, and from a platform erected for the occasion, and amply decorated with American flags, the speakers made their addresses. Mr. Francis Lieber was called to the chair. He addressed the meeting in the German language, and his speech elicited much applause. He remarked that the present campaign was not so exciting as that of last year, when not only this country, but the whole of Europe awaited the result as if the end of the world was approaching. The present State election, however, was of great importance, and it behooved every one to do his duty in respect to it. New-York was the banner State of the Union, and she must not prove a defaulter in the cause. Germans, especially, must everywhere and on every occasion, oppose Slavery, and at the forthcoming election must uphold the principles which will assuredly rule the Union in 1860. (Great applause.)

Mr. Frank was the next speaker. He addressed the assemblage in German, and read the resolutions adopted at the Syracuse Convention. He charged his hearers, who were voters, to be sexty at the ballot-boxes, inasmuch as it was most important to future prospects that the Republican Party should carry the State this Fall. He then read the list of Republican candidates for state offices, and proposed them to the meeting for ratification. This was done unanimously without a dissenting voice.

The Chairman next introduced Mr. Charles L. Reese to the audience, remarking that he was an American gentleman who had traveled much in Germany as well as other parts of Europe, and had a great love for the German nation, and profound sympathy for those who, spurning despotism, had declared themselves forever on the side of Liberty.

Mr. Reese, on rising to speak, remarked that they were met on that occasion not alone as Germans, but as Americans citizens. It was true that the question of this State election was not so weighty as usual, yet it was important for Republicans to prepare a compact organization, and it was especially necessary that Germans, on whom so much was to be yielded, should show that they stood firm in the order of battle. Americans and Germans meet here on one common platform, free speech, free soil, free Government. In this City the Germans number 100,000, but over the land they are numerable by thousands, and it is not too much to say that they go far to represent the thought of this great nation. Therefore their position on this great question is most important. They were not like those people, from another hemisphere, who came to this country smarting from tyranny abroad, only to shriek, when they got here, for Slavery is this the land of their adoption. Time, many Germans were beguiled by the word Democrat. The meaning of that word in Germany and its meaning here was very different. They all knew what it meant in old Germany—a man who would rather be clothed in rags and steeped in poverty, than enjoy shameful wealth; a man who would not crouch at the feet of the oppressor; a man who at his life's risk would be the antagonist of all oppression, and who would lay down his life as the price of freedom. But in this country it means a man who has money to buy votes, and corrupt the voter; a man who lounges about lobbies and bar-rooms for the express purpose of corruption; who has licked the feet of the slaveholder so long that he cannot stand straight. That is what Democracy means in this country. Naturalists say that the wild beasts of the old world degenerate in America, and that the lion becomes only a wildcat, but here the lion (of Democracy) changed to an ass, though he clothes himself in a lion's skin. The Germans, Mr. Reese continued, have an important part to play in the future of this country. In Western Texas they were laboring to great effect. There they were cultivating free cotton by free labor, and are doing more than can be at present calculated for the propagation of free principles, because they thought it disgraceful to their manhood to own a slave. Alluding to the Republican prospects in Missouri, Mr. Reese insisted that things were rapidly brightening. He narrated in German an anecdote of a Frenchman, who, having traveled in the States, returned to Paris, and being asked whether Americans were good men or bad men, replied that he did not know about that, but he would rather be in hell than in Missouri. All this, Mr. Reese said, had nearly passed, and Missouri had come within a few hundreds of electing a Free Soil Governor. That was owing to the German settlers, and these noble settlers would make Missouri free. All the great Germans that he had the honor of knowing, such as Julius Fröbel, Dr. Solger, and their respected Chairman, were all Republicans. The German mind was naturally an ally of Freedom. Of the Hard Times he would say that they had one good effect—they reduced the price of negroes; and, with them, the price of land will fall, and Slavery, being no longer profitable, will be driven down to the gulf where it belongs. He eulogized the Republican State candidates; there were no lobby men among them. For himself, he should vote for Judge Davis, although he was the nominee of another party, because, in his decision on the Police Act, he had shown himself superior to all party. Let them all do their duty, and in 1860, Germans and Americans would unite triumphantly in support of Free Soil, Free Speech, and a Free President (loud cheers.)

After a fine tune by the band, the Chairman announced, in reply to loud calls for his appearance, that Gen. Nye was detained by sickness from taking part in the proceedings.

Mr. Tonnelier then addressed the meeting in support of the Republican nominations. He was followed by other speakers (who all addressed the meeting in German) to the same effect. The meeting dispersed at an early hour, with three cheers for the Republican State ticket.

Twelfth Ward.—The Republican Association has nominated in this Ward Charles E. Weitzerman, of Fort Washington, for the Assembly, which nomination has since been indorsed by the Americans.

Fusion in Westchester.—At the meeting held yesterday at Tarrytown, of Americans and Republicans, the Committee reported a ticket with John W. Fredon for Senator, and Lucius B. Tripp for County Treasurer; but the meeting not being able to agree upon some minor County officers, adjourned without taking any further action. Mr. Fredon and Mr. Tripp have both already been nominated by the American and Republican parties as their candidates.

The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, President Clerey in the Chair.

Alderman Drake presented a petition from the residents on and near the route of the Hudson River Railroad, for City cars to be placed on that road. The petition was referred. Petitions were received from the Historical Society and the Church of St. Ann, for two gas-lamps in front of each of their buildings. Referred.

Alderman Monahan presented a resolution in favor of directing the Comptroller to pay Stephen H. Branch $2,000 for services performed for the Matsell Investigating Committee. Laid over under the rule.

The Committee on Salaries and Offices reported in favor of increasing the salary of the City Inspector to $5,000; and a report was received from the Board of Councilmen in favor of increasing the salary of the Street Commissioner to $5,000. Laid over under the rules.

Alderman Drake offered a resolution to the effect that the Commissioners of the Central Park be requested to make active preparations for improving the Central Park, and to prosecute the work as long as the weather will permit, until the appropriation of $250,000 is exhausted. Adopted.

A communication was received from the Comptroller in answer to a resolution as to whether any moneys had been paid on account of the contract for grading Fourth-avenue, from Thirty-eighth to Fifty-eighth-street, and whether the work was being done according to contract. The Comptroller says a certificate for 70 per cent., amounting to $10,126 55, was presented to him in December last for payment in advance. The contractor is John McGrane. His bid for box drains was $5 per running foot. Upon examination it was ascertained that the specifications called for only 666 feet of box culverts, and this at the contract price would amount to $4,800. On the first certificate it appeared the contractor had built 1,550 feet, costing $7,750, making an addition to the contract of $2,850. Upon this state of facts the Comptroller declined to pay any advance unless the contract was restricted to the amount of box culverts originally intended, and therefore no payments have been made on the contract. The communication says it would appear that double the quantity of culvert is contemplated, and by reliable authority they are not over 75 cents per foot. A sufficient amount of culvert was specified in the contract, and this addition would appear to be for the benefit of the contractor. Ordered to be printed.

The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met as usual on Thursday—the President, J. N. Phillips, Esq., in the Chair.

A NEW POST-OFFICE.

Councilman Jones offered a resolution that a Joint Committee be appointed to consider the appropriation of a portion of the Park for a Post-Office. He advocated the resolution at the meeting, and upon the site named. The adoption of the resolution and immediate steps for the commencement of the building would go far to alleviate the impending distress among the people.

Councilman Brennan approved of the object of the resolution. He regretted that it had not been introduced earlier.

Councilman McCabrie spoke in support of the resolution.

Councilman Warren was extremely glad that the necessity for the protection of American laborers had been recognized by the various speakers. He should gladly vote for the resolution. Adopted.

Several petitions were presented, in light various localities with gas, and for the formation of sewer.

SPECIAL ORDER—THE COMPTROLLER.

The report of the Committee on the condition of the Finance Department was taken up as special order. It was a lengthy document, and during its reading the hands either left the seats or closed their conversation in consequence. A Babel interchange of chatter proceeded among a crowd of strangers. At one period only 22 members were in their places.

The report of the Committee having been read, Councilmen Franklin addressed the Board, with many noisy interruptions from Capt. Rynders and in the Park.

He said: The Committee on the investigation of public accounts presented their report at a former meeting of the Board. The Committee had entered upon the discharge of the duty assigned to them boldly and fearlessly, and they expected defamation and abuse. The facts stated therein were true; but the half was not yet told. If this investigation were allowed to go forward, this Committee would present a statement, compared to which the report already presented bears no comparison. The Comptroller was too much under the influence of a man (that is the Auditor) who taken from the person appointed by law, a large share of the auditing of the accounts, and audits them himself. Again, the keeper of the books of intestate accounts in the Comptroller's office, appointed by him, when holding a position in another department, was employed in copying the New-York City Directory, at the rate of $1,200 per year, being found too incapable to discharge other duties. The Collectors of Assessments from 1853 to the 1st of January 1856, sent their returns to the Clerk of Arrears (as spoken of in the report) full of glaring errors; and if a proper auditing of their accounts were had, large claims would be found against them. Accounts have also been paid in the Finance Department without proper auditing, and payments have been charged to accounts to which they did not belong. Half of the truth was not developed in that report, bad as it appears to be; and if the Common Council would have the courage to appoint such a Committee as will have the nerve to continue this work fearlessly and boldly, more astounding revelations will yet be made. The resolutions offered by the Committee should be adopted at once, and the work immediately resumed. Thousands of dollars will thus be saved to the taxpayers of the City of New-York, and it will be determined who are the individuals that should be compelled to return the sums illegally withheld from the coffers of the treasury. If the truth were known, the Common Council has not been so much to blame. The censure is due to the Departments, which the Common Council have not heretofore been able to reach. Employes in the Comptroller's office had endeavored to prevent the presentation of the report. Why did they oppose it? They had not seen the report, and hence did not know its contents. They felt guilty, and they knew that if it told one-half of the truth, their conduct would be exposed. He did not say the Comptroller influenced his employes to take this course, but the fact is plain that they did do it. The appropriations are well nigh exhausted, and the treasury is on the eve of bankruptcy. There will be a loan of $3,000,000 shortly to pay off, and at the rate we had been traveling for the last five years, we should soon reach the end. Let us now do what we can to recover to the City what is legally due to the treasury and take immediate steps to retrench and reform our expenditures.

Councilman McCahill asked for the name of the man who had audited the accounts instead of the Auditor.

Councilman Franklin explained, but

Councilman McCahill declared himself not satisfied.

Councilman Jones had opposed the investigation because he believed the Comptroller honest. He had refused to argue the report, because he thought it too sweeping. But subsequent investigation had convinced him that the office was disgracefully conducted, and that the books were incorrectly kept, not worthy of a common grocer. The Comptroller might be an honest man, but he was old and infirm and his officials thought they knew better than himself how business ought to be conducted. When asked how he liked the report he, the Comptroller, replied, he "did not know; his daughter read it to him last night." Go, said the speaker, after any receipt, it cannot be found; if he were not a religious man he would say it was a damnable way of keeping the public accounts, and if the tax-payers would not wake up to their interests and duty, it was most appalling and shameful. Had the Common Council any control over the Alms-House Department, or indeed of any other? The people were nominally Democratic or Republican, but were powerless. It would be found that the minority had as much power as the majority. There was no rule in the City. Ask the Comptroller any question, his reply was that he had no power in the matter. And the great City of New-York is in debt $30,000,000 to-day. In the various departments the Republicans had as much to say, minority as they were, as the majority had. The Almshouse Commissioners could treat the citizens with good wine, but it was uniformly done at the expense of the City. The Government, such as it was, had been thrust upon them by the State of New-York; let the people fearlessly examine these books, exposing every man, whatever be his politics, so that eventually the Common Council, and not the various Commissioners of the Departments, should govern the City. Let the Common Council appoint the Mayor, and let the majority rule; if that could not be done, or if the Mayor does not do his duty, hang him, lynch him, and send the Council adrift.

Councilman Opperson asked who elected the Comptroller? Councilman Jones deserved the compliments of the Republicans for his able defence of that party. Had there been stealing? Who stole the books of the Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies? Was the theft committed by the Black Republicans?

Councilman McCahill said the Common Council were responsible for all the stealing. [Laughter.]

Councilman Jones said the Comptroller's office developed a deplorable state of affairs. The book-keeper acknowledged that when public stock was issued there was no public account entered in the book. The only entry he does make is to credit the cash received. The whole matter is in the stock clerk's hands, and he can issue stock to any amount. What we want to find out, for instance, is, how it is that men are shown incorrectly to be defaulters—Harry Howard, for instance? Who are and who are not the actual defaulters? The Committee propose to define these matters, but it was clear that the books were kept in a disorderly manner, and were discreditable to the City.

Councilman Warren remarked that to the Comptroller by law is given full power to keep the books in his own manner. He would maintain that the Comptroller alone was at fault, and that the responsibility did not lie at the door of the Common Council. The Comptroller was strictly responsible, and if not able to attend to his duties, the quicker the City was rid of so inefficient a servant the better.

Councilman Brandall declared the reading of the report had much shocked his feelings. The Comptroller ought to resign. He might be personally honest, as far as his own private transactions were concerned. He moved the adoption of a resolution to appropriate $5,000 to the Committee to continue their investigations, as asked for in the report.

Councilman Opperson observed that the majority had manifested a great deal of astonishment. But it was worthy of remark that next Tuesday was election day. [Sensation.]

Councilman Jones asked if boys and old men, being elected to public offices, if a member of that Board chose to remark upon that, was such remark of necessity scurrilous? The observation was truthful and not uttered in bad feeling, that "his daughter had read that document" to the Comptroller. It would be well if the Corporation would ask him in his decrepitude to resign.

Councilman Isaacs said that attempts had been made three years ago to elect John H. Giles—the place then was was a competent, good man. Two more votes would have done the business, and now the majority confess that a man has been elected incompetent and unfit. Not fit? Why? Because, forsooth, they think he has come out Republican, and why did they think so? Perhaps, because he would not pay the Police. We (the Republicans) are about electing a Mayor. We say we will give the City a better man. Now don't (said the speaker) reflect Mayor Wood and then complain of your own act. Believe that the minority can possibly offer you candidates that will not subsequently fall under the censures you impose upon your own nominees.

Councilman Butzel thought the amount demanded was too much. He moved that the matter be laid on the table and that 1,000 copies of the report be printed. An oldgman, just tottering to the grave, the speaker must not commit him to eternal perdition without examination. He had seen things in that office that were shameful. Still the Comptroller was too old a man, and to decide upon the matter in a night was impossible.

Councilman McCahill had an amendment to offer, directing the Counsel to the Corporation to prosecute all who have embezzled the public funds. The worthy Councilman spelled the word "embezzle" correctly enough, amid roars of laughter.

Councilman Franklin hoped it would not be pressed.

Councilman McCahill consented to withdraw it.

On vote upon the resolution of the report and adoption of the resolutions appended, there appeared, affirmative, 25; negative, 6. The President declared the question carried. Councilman Brady demurred, upon the ground that 45 votes were necessary, on the ground that it was a money question.

COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS.

An angry debate followed on the question of the election of a Commissioner of Deeds, some members thinking the Board of Aldermen had not done the handsome thing to the Board of Councilmen in previous similar matters.

Some other unimportant matters were disposed of, and the Board adjourned to Monday.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Hoboken Homicide.—The trial of Frederick Cueva, for the murder of Oscar De Granval, was continued in the Hudson County Court yesterday. Mr. Scudder opened the case for the defence. The first witness was Frederick Pfeiffam, recalled. He told the circumstances of the case with little variation from his former statement. Joseph M. Atwood was called. He heard the report of a pistol, ran out of his house, and saw De Granval lying on the sidewalk. Other witnesses were called for the defence and the case was adjourned till to-day.

Democratic Assembly Nomination.—The Democrats of the Second Assembly District, comprising the First, Second and Third Wards of Jersey City, held their Convention on Wednesday evening, and nominated William Vesnger, of the First Ward.

THURSDAY, Oct. 29—P. M.

The floating debts of the half-dozen prominent and costly Railways which have been recently brought to protest, mainly through the general embarrassment of the money panic, amount in the aggregate to something like $11,350,000. The sum is a large, but should not be a discouraging one to the owners of a property costing one hundred and thirty-one millions of dollars. Their own share-capital constitutes fifty-one millions of this sum. The gross aggregate income from the Roads last year was about $20,000,000, and thirty ⅌ cent. of this sum is equal to the yearly interest upon the eighty millions of debt. Allowing fifty-five ⅌ cent. more for expenses, and counting nothing for the income from the landed estate of one of the Companies, (the Illinois Central,) the remainder to be thought of and looked after by the proprietary is equal to a net income of $3,000,000, or 6 ⅌ cent. on the par of the original investment. But the whole capital involved, $51,000,000, is now selling in the market at the rate of only $13,500,000, in consequence of about fifteen ⅌ cent. of the incumberance remaining unfunded and tainted by protest. The future appreciation of the Stock to even one-half the original cost, or to the value of $26,000,000, holds out an inducement to the prompt care of this debt, equal to $12,000,000, to say nothing of the danger of losing the whole by the careless or desperate indifference of the stockholders.

Now we submit that this view of the case (and certainly not the best that might be taken) is not one for discouragement, even in these hard times. The substratum of real value represented by six great trunk lines, finished and completely equipped, and measuring no less than twenty-four hundred miles of railway, at a fair estimate, is not less than one hundred millions of dollars over and above the pressing encumbrance of $11,350,000, which it is proposed, in one shape or another, to get rid of at an early day. If to this we add the landed estate of one of the Companies and the coal-fields of another, the valuation rises to the original cost of the whole property. The floating debt itself, though extremely objectionable in form, is not of a magnitude to produce discouragement. A year or two ago it was carried, to an equal amount, at a cost of from 7 to 10 ⅌ cent., without exciting remark, or at all events astonishment, divided, as the aggregate was, between the six lines, of which four only were then productive. But railway credit was struck down—we need not here discuss by what means—in the course of the present year, and although it was quite as evident to close observers then as it is patent to the whole business world now, that a similar course of indiscriminate warfare and panic-making would, on much shorter notice, paralyze mercantile credit, and destroy half the value, and suspend the whole income from bank stocks, it is no longer an open question as to the remedy to be applied, and that without delay. The debt must be paid or funded, and speedily, and the credit of a property worth ten times the sum thus restored and its real value vindicated. The bugbear of railway embarrassment having lost half its terrors, by the occurrence of a train of panic events which touch more nearly and destroy for the time more hopelessly other interests, with less than half the power of recuperation, the stockholders and creditors of these companies may well feel encouraged to come to the work of restoration with a trusting will and a ready purse. The motive held out is not one of public spirit, but private gain. And the same motive is presented to other parties, having money to invest, to look into the same property at the present market value of the stock and bonds. There is nothing under cloud of the panic that offers stronger inducement to creditors especially. The share capital at the back of this $11,350,000 is, as stated, $51,000,000. We could name six mercantile firms, here and in the neighboring cities, who, at a liberal estimate, two months ago, could not have counted a larger capital in business than $3,500,000, who have fallen under the panic with involvements that aggregate $10,500,000. In other words, they saw sixfold their capital. Their bills have enjoyed such credit at bank and in the discount offices as to permit them to owe all of this, and more when required. The money lender and private capitalist have willingly, if not eagerly, added their bills at 7@10 ⅌ cent., because they had been frightened out of all faith in railways, and could find nothing so choice. The time and occasion now offer to review the ground, as presented, after a common disaster has overtaken both interests.

The prevailing feeling in the market to-day, as the [illegible] packets from Liverpool do hear from. The Canada left this side on Wednesday, Oct. 7, from Boston, and carried news a fortnight later than that of Saturday. The Stock Market had been better for a few days, and the quotations were higher than by the Africa of Oct. 3. But our Bank Statement, on Monday afternoon, Oct. 5, had set everything back, and Stocks and the Exchanges were both quoted depressed on Tuesday. The response to this steamer is the next news to be received here. It will reach us by telegraph from Halifax about Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning. The effect in England will probably be to increase the shipments of Gold by the return trip of the Canada, and to add somewhat to the general uneasiness about American affairs. The six or seven days succeeding the sailing of the Canada from this side were prolific in stirring and startling financial events, the latest result being the general suspension of payments in specie by the New-York banks. This fact, of itself, will relieve the anxiety on the other side, especially on the sensitive point of sending further sums of gold to pay for cotton and equalize the exchanges. It will also qualify the worst of the railway news, which went out in the same steamer, such as the protest of the Michigan Central and New-York and Erie, and the assignment of the Illinois Central. All these occurred, or were first announced here, on Saturday, Oct. 10. The banks failed on the succeeding Tuesday, Oct. 13, and thereupon the stock and bonds of the suspended railways immediately advanced 5@8 ⅌ cent. New-York Central went to 90 ⅌ cent. after touching 80 ⅌ cent., and several other stocks improved in proportion. On Wednesday, the 14th, the Bank suspension was officially announced, and the postscripts to the mail by the Arabia advised the advance in Stocks and the probability of an advance in Exchange at the same time. The Arabia will probably bring the first response to her own news. Her mail was due in London on Monday last. She will sail, on her return, next Saturday, Oct. 31. Her arrival here about Wednesday, the 11th November, will be looked for with much interest, but we do not see, under all the circumstances of the news she carried out, that her accounts need create serious apprehension in advance. We should infer the contrary, looking to the fact that a sense of relief from continued fear and anxiety, must be felt on the other side on learning that the banks had stopped cash payments on this, and thus opened the way to some sort of movement in Exchange.

The ease in Money at bank is quite marked to-day, and the difficulty is now felt to be the absence of the right class of borrowers and the right description of paper. There is, of course, an indisposition to extend the line of discounts to parties who have in any way faltered during the pressure, but to other houses, who have paid straight through, and expect, with a little help in the way of discounts, to continue to pay, every reasonable facility is granted. A number of the large banks, are in want of first-class short paper, and some of them would not refuse to lend money at call on first-rate collateral. The Domestic Exchanges have improved on Philadelphia. The brokers are buying at 96 to-day. On Baltimore, 92; on Richmond, 88; on Boston, 99¼@99¾. The terms on Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis in the West, and Charleston, Mobile and New-Orleans in the South, are still unsettled. Gold continues dull, at 100¼@100⅜ ⅌ cent. The next European steamer in the North Star on Saturday for Southampton. The business in Exchange for this opportunity scarcely opened to-day. London is held for 108@107 ⅌ cent.

Part of the Gold received yesterday by the Persia will go immediately to Canada. Some other parcels go to New-Orleans by next steamer in that direction. The Granada, from New-Orleans and Havana, arrived to-day, with $356,000 in Gold.

There was another strong market for Stocks to-day, and a further advance of 3 ⅌ cent. on Reading shares, and 1 ⅌ cent. on New-York Central; the general list showing a firm foot-ing through the early session of the brokers, and also after the Second Board in the afternoon. On the limited list of the Second Board prices show a little weakness, but the final closing was quite stiff, particularly for Reading, which run up to 33 ⅌ cent. for delivery to-morrow. New-York Central left off 65 ⅌ cent.; Erie, 19¼; Illinois Central 80¼ bid; Rock Island, 67; Missouri Sixes, 68 ⅌ cent.

The coupons of the Huron County, Ohio, Bonds due on the 1st of November will be paid by Messrs. Carpenter & Vermilye, No. 44 Wall-street. Messrs. Duncan, Sherman & Co., will pay, on the 1st November, the interest due on the 7 ⅌ cent. Bonds of the New-York Central Railroad, and the 6 ⅌ cent. stock of Albany City. The November coupon on the Bonds of the Evansville and Crawfordsville Road will be paid by the Farmers' Trust Co.
